WHITE HOUSE DOORS AJAR

President Taft Holds His Fourth and Last New Years Reception.

SPECTACLE IS BRILLIANT ONE

Time-Honored Function at Washington Attracts Great Throng.

Washington, Jan. 1.—President Taft's fourth and last New Year's reception at the white house was attended by a day beautiful and bright. Thousands early turned their eyes and their steps in the direction of the executive mansion. Long before the time the chief executive of the nation was ready to shake hands with every citizen who cared to avail himself of the privilege, a line of men, women and children stood in a line from the front door of the white house to the distant gate and far beyond towards the state, war and navy building.

The rich and gorgeous uniforms of the foreign diplomats, the gold lace of the long line of American army and navy officers and in the background the brilliant scarlet coats of the Marine band were features in the moving pictures of the day's events at the white house with the colorless costumes of thousands of ordinary citizens.

The president and Mrs. Taft prepared at 11 o'clock to wish a happy new year first to members of the cabinet and their wives and to the diplomatic corps; these were followed by the members of the supreme court and by the judges of the other courts here; then former cabinet officers, ambassadors and ministers; next members of congress, then the army, navy and marine corps officers, after which came a long line of government officials, members of commissions, then members of the Grand Army of the Republic and a number of other military societies.

After all these had been greeted the doors of the white house stood open to the humblest citizen in the land and he, too, was assured of a hearty handshake and a smile.

One Touch Missing.

One picturesque touch absent from the New Year kaleidoscope of the color of the white house for the first time in ten years was missing because Baron Hengerlmuller, ambassador from Austria-Hungary, dean of the diplomatic corps, was not in the city. His royally gorgeous costume of rich purple and red always attracted much attention. Several other diplomats were unable to be present because of sickness, the Chilean and Colombian ministers being among the number. The diplomatic line was led by Ambassador Jusserand of France.

MAYBE HE'S NOT THERE AFTER ALL

But Detectives Are Taking No Chances on William Rockefeller.

STICKING AT POSTS

New York, Jan. 1.—Detectives and deputy sergeants-at-arms of the house of representatives in squads of six, spent New Year's day watching the house of William Rockefeller, on Fifth avenue.

The idea gained ground today that Mr. Rockefeller, after all, was not here, but Charles F. Riddell, sergeant-at-arms of the house, said that he would take no chances, but would continue the siege. One of the detectives was certain that Mr. and Mrs. Rockefeller left their residence here on Sunday morning.

A maid who left the Rockefeller house this morning and ran across the street to post a letter, caused a flurry among the early shift of detectives. One of them tried to see the address on the envelope, but the servant was too quick for him. As a result of the incident, however the postoffice authorities may be asked to help the process servers by noting the addresses on the Rockefeller mail.

REVELLERS ARE SENT TO PRISON

South Bend Men Careless With Weapons in New Years Welcome.

JUDGE VERY CAUSTIC

South Bend, Ind., Jan. 1.—A number of New Year's eve celebrators were given jail sentences by City Judge Farabaugh here today, for carrying concealed weapons. Alexander Thilman and John Magyazcnak, who admitted they had used cartridges loaded with bullets in celebrating the advent of 1913, were given the heaviest sentences, twenty-six days in jail each. In sentencing the men the judge referred to the number of accidental shootings which had resulted in death in South Bend during the past year.

"We were celebrating a Happy New Year," explained Thilman.

"Yes and there has been just about a dozen other careless fellows in the last twelve months who were celebrating a happy new year," replied the court, "and today relatives of the men who were shot are mourning for them. This way you have of celebrating the coming of New Year is rotten and if you do it again I am going to try to send you to the penitentiary."

GATES CLOSE BEHIND THEM

Convicted Labor Leaders in Prison Garb at Fort Leavenworth.

JOURNEY ENDED AT 7:15 O'CLOCK

Each Wrote New Years Message to Family Aboard Train at Midnight.

Leavenworth, Kan., Jan. 1.—The 33 labor union officials sentenced at Indianapolis for complicity in the McNamara dynamite plots, arrived at the federal prison here at 7:15 o'clock today. They immediately were photographed, dressed in penitentiary clothes and formally enrolled as convicts.

As Frank M. Ryan, president of the Iron Workers' International union, Olaf Tvitmoe, the California leader; Herbert S. Hockin; John T. Butler and the others stepped from the special train which brough them from Indianapolis, they were taken in charge by the prison authorities.

New Year's day thus found the labor leaders beginning their punishment for their connection with the crimes for which the McNamara brothers, confessed dynamiters, are serving terms in the state prison at San Quentin, California.

Hair Cut and Uniform.

The prisoners were taken by rail directly into the prison grounds. Their first view of the interior was from the windows of the train. Within an hour after arrival each prisoner had been subjected to a hair cut and garbed in the prison uniform.

On account of it being a holiday, the details of assigning the men to work was delayed until tomorrow. Most of the new prisoners are iron workers and it is understood the warden is to put them on the construction of buildings.

Tvetmoe is the only one of the convicted men not affiliated with the iron workers' union and it is expected he will be given clerical work. Ryan may be given similar work because of his age and apparent feeble condition.

A Memorial Trip.

A Memorable Trip.

It was a memorable trip which brought Indianapolis on New Year's eve. Once started, United States Marshal Edward Schmidt decided not to reach Leavenworth before daylight so that almost twenty hours were passed on the train.

The train was guarded at windows and doors as a rolling adjunct of the penitentiary, all the curtains being drawn and no one being permitted to give out any word as to the happenings within.

$2,000,000 IS CUT TO $80,000

Big Slash in Requests of State Institutions for Funds

MADE BY COMMITTEE

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 1.—Requests of state institutions for $2,000,000 additional appropriations have been cut down to $80,000 by the legislative visiting committee which is putting the finishing touches on its report to the next session of the Indiana general assembly which is to commence January 9. The committee is composed of Representative Jesse E. Eschbach, republican, Warsaw; Senator James J. Netterville, democrat, Anderson, and Representative Joseph M. Cravens, democrat, Madison.

The committee began its task of inspecting all the state institutions and offices and of going through the reports of state boards and commissions on Nov. 20. It will recommend that the general assembly vote an appropriation of $20,000 for the colonization scheme at the Eastern Indiana Hospital for the Insane at Richmond. The annual budget of this hospital calls for an expenditure of $130,000.

The total asked for by the more than twenty institutions of Indiana exceeded $4,000,000. This includes the $2,000,000 which the committee has reduced to $80,000. The committee will also recommend a increased appropriation for the epileptic village at Newcastle. It will oppose the addition of a bill to the tax rate for the support of Indiana university, Purdue and the state normal at Terre Haute.

The finding of the legislative committee is not final and its advice on appropriations may be revised by the general assembly. The report will be referred to the ways and means committee in the lower house.

Indicted in Knabe Case, He Gives Bond

DR. WILLIAM B. CRAIG.

Indianapolis, Jan. 1.—Dr. William B. Craig, head of local veterinary college, who was indicted by the Marion county grand jury yesterday in connection with the death of Dr. Helene Knabe, in October, 1911, apeared in the criminal court late yesterday and gave bonds in the sum of $15,000. A. M. Ragsdale, an undertaker, indicted as an accessory after the fact in the same case, is expected to give bond also.

MICHIGAN HAS NEW GOVERNOR

Ferris, Democrat, Faces Strongly Republican Legislature

WILL ELECT SENATOR

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 1.—When the Michigan legislature had convened today and Woodbridge N. Ferris, democrat, had taken the oath of office as governor, a republican legislative majority faced a democratic governor for the first time in twenty years in this state. One of the first acts of the legislature will be the election of a United States senator. William Alden Smith claims victory in this contest because of the republican majority in the legislature and his primary victory. His opponents are Alfred Lucking, democrat, and Theodore Joslin, progressive.

The convening of the legislature and the inaugural ceremonies were to take place at noon. Among the proposed matters of legislation to come up at this session are: Initiative and referendum; re-submission of woman suffrage amendment; a corrupt practices act; reform in judicial procedure; a bill making it possible for a three-fourths' vote of juries to return a verdict in civil cases; pensions for public school teachers and revision of election and primary laws.

LIVELY DIN GREETS 1913

Fort Wayne Merry-makers Give Noisy Welcome to New Year.

THRONGS OUT AT MIDNIGHT HOUR

Medley of Whistles, Bells, Feasting and Song Mark Year's Advent.

With the blowing of whistles and the ringing of bells, Fort Wayne greeted the arrival of the year 1913. The city's parting with the old year was also very demonstrative for as the hour of midnight approached, services were in progress in many churches and scores of private watch parties in all parts of the city bid farewell to 1912, and mirthfully received the new year with glad hearts and brilliant hopes thta the prosperity of the next twelve months will exceed that of the last.

The streets were filled with New Year's revelers and the business district assumed a typical holiday appearance, with thousands of young merry-makers parading the thoroughfares, eagerly awaiting the arrival of midnight to turn lose the noise in greeting the new year.

The deep blare of factory whistles, accompanied by the boom of church bells in all parts of the city, started shortly before the arrival of the new year, and continued the noisy welcome for five minutes after the year 1912 had slipped into history. Then followed impressive silence which donated to all, that 1913 had made its bow to the world.

Today all is quiet about the city. All business houses and most of the factories are closed in observance of the holiday. The city is observing the birth of a new year in many different ways. Open house is being featured by practically all social and fraternal organizations in the city, and services in the churches this morning were attended by large audiences. Matinee dances will be held this afternoon, and this evening attention will be divided between the theater, dances and private parties.

Revelry Cut Short.

In spite of the fact that owners of cafes and hotels were compelled to close their bars and put the "lid" on the flow of fire water at midnight, it is estimated that during the evening, between $4,500 and $5,000 was spent in the city for liquid refreshments in the popular eating places.

At the Wayne, Anthony, Baltes and Heidelberg cafes, all tables had been reserved in advance, and scores of pleasure seekers were turned away on account of short accommodations. The reveling and merry making in the cafes continued until midnight.

Special orchestras furnished music in most of the hotels and cafes, and when the birth of 1913 was proclaimed by the sound of whistles and bells, the diners joined in song and shouting. Some attempts were made to disregard the "lid" after the midnight hour, but it is said that proprietors universally announced that "the stuff was off."

The City's Prosperity.

During the year 1912 Fort Wayne enjoyed the most prosperous twelve months in its history, according to leaders in every branch of the city's existence. Business, it is said by the business men, was never better. The city has made wonderful progress in all lines of endeavor, and the new year is started under the most favorable conditions.

Bankers declare their business the best in history. All financial institutions in the city have noted wonderful prosperity, and as evidence of increased business, it is cited the bank clearings for

AN AXE IS SENT BY PARCELS POST

Was Among First Articles Received at Fort Wayne Postoffice.

MAIL WAS VERY LIGHT

When the city carriers returned to the postoffice after their first collection of mail this morning, about a dozen articles of parcels post mail were deposited. The stamps were properly cancelled and the first parcels post mail sent through the Fort Wayne postoffice was on its way to its destination.

Officials at the office were not in the least surprised at the light amount of parcels post mail. Postmaster Robert B. Hanna and Assistant Postmaster William J. Hess, state that he new system, which went into effect this morning, will not be used generally to any great extent until the people become more accustomed to its possibilities. It is believed, however, that when the rural carriers go out tomorrow, they will collect numerous packages to be sent by parcels post. The rural carriers made no deliveries today.

Among the first articles received for the parcels post mail at the local office was an axe. The first package to leave the office was addressed to Kewanna, Ind., and weighed four pounds. The five local business concerns, who on Tuesday informed Postmaster Hanna that they had considerable mail to be sent out by parcels post, did not mail their articles during the morning hours, but clerks at the office expect them either this afternoon or tomorrow morning.

"My entire time so far today has been occupied by answering telephone calls concerning the mailing of parcels post matter," said Assistant Postmaster Hess this morning. "The calls for information come so rapidly that it is difficult to take care of them. Some want to know how much it will cost to send a package weighing so many pounds to such and such a city. Others want to know when to buy parcels post stamps, and some want to know how long it will be in transit. Judging from the inquiries, the people are interested in the new system, and are preparing to make use of it. One call last night sought information concerning a package addressed to Kewanna, Ind. It weighed four pounds, and after the party was told how much it would cost to send the package by parcels post, I forgot the incident. This morning, the Kewanna package was the first received at the office."

LAWMAKERS AT WORK.

Massachusetts Legislature Faces Much Important Business.

Boston, Jan. 1.—With several months of important work in prospect the Massachusetts legislature convened today for the 134th annual session. Both branches are strongly republican. All the officers of last year were re-elected.

More than 100 petitions, many of them dealing with railway transportation, which is expected to be one of the leading issues before the legislature this year, were on file with the clerks when the two branches met.

HAND SHAKES WITH CIGARS

New County Officials Greet Their Friends at the Court House.

SOFT PEDAL PUT ON FORMALITIES

James D. Butt is the New President of the Commissioners.

Handshaking, New Year greetings and cigars marked the official changes that took place in the court house today when A. C. Gladieux became sheriff, Allen Hursh recorder and William C. Schaier a member of the board of county commissioners.

The soft pedal was put on the formalities. Offices were kept open until noon, but a legal holiday prevented the transaction of any business other than the organization of the board of county commissioners, in the course of which James D. Butt became president, F. William Franke vice president and William C. Schwier secretary. This disposed of the board just sat around until the noon whistle blew and then all went home.

Helped Out Successor.

Sheriff Reichelderfer and Frank Ecks helped out the new sheriff and his deputies by showing them around and pointing out where things are kept so that there will be no confusion in the morning. Barney Schonefeldt helped out in this task, too.

Henry E. Branning, the new office deputy, spent most of the day learning the combination to the office safe and came near breaking at least one resolution on the job.

The sheriff announced he would keep his office open most of the day as he expected a lot of friends and he wanted an open house in which to welcome them.

Found Some New Business.

Allen "Doc" Hurst found enough new business in his first mail to start the machinery in his office tomorrow morning. This mail contained two papers for record and the best of it is that both

THAT COLD NEW YEAR'S FORTY-NINE YEARS AGO.

Several pioneer Fort Wayne citizens have called the attention of The Sentinel to the fact that this is the forty-ninth anniversary of the famous "cold New Year's day" of 1863.

That is a meterological landmark that is indelibly impressed upon the memories of all who were old enough to realize the intensity of the cold which inaugurated the new year forty-nine years ago and to recall it now. "That cold New Year's" will live in history.

HE'S THE BEST DODGER OF SUBPOENAS IN THE WHOLE WALL STREET BUNCH.

WILLIAM ROCKEFELLER.

Washington, Jan. 1.—The government has just staged a fine mystery melodrama in New York. The Pujo money trust investigation committee wanted William Rockefeller, brother of John D. The investigators, suspected that he might know something about high finance.

They had hauled Morgan over the coals, and raked lesser lights good and plenty, but they couldn't find John D.'s brother Bill, though a bunch of subpoena servers had been hunting him for several months.

At last Uncle Sam got mad and a whole battalion of detectives, deputy

Year Brings Some New Twists of the Lucky "13" to Wilson

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 1.—Nineteen hundred and thirteen was greeted by President-elect Wilson today as his "lucky one." He is always delighted at any combination by addition, multiplication or substraction that will produce this number.

"Thirteen has always been running through my life in connection with some good fortune," he said; the year of his nomination to the presidency produced 13 by adding the digits 1-9-1-2. Woodrow Wilson contains just thirteen letters. He was 13 years a professor at Princeton. He was elected the thirteenth president of the university. He presided over about 1,300 students. Even the "31st," which is the presidential term begun on March 4, produced the lucky number on reversal. He will be the "28th president" of the country, a combination which the president-elect at first considered baffling until it was pointed out it counted up just 13 letters.

"And then there are two others," said Gov. Wilson today. "Not only will I be taking office in 1913, but the electoral college meets on January 13 this year."

The Wilson family planned to spend the first day of its "lucky" year at home.

Christmas Gasoline

AS WILLIAM H. JUNK was passing thoughtfully along the street that evening he noticed a strong odor of gasoline. "There ought to be a law," he observed to himself, "compelling automobile owners to be sufficiently careful of the rights of other people's noses to avoid spilling gasoline in the streets."

Mr. Junk is a stenographer in the office of the American Steel Dredge company. It was on Christmas night he was on his way to an east-end home for the purpose of acquiring a partner to attend one of the numerous hops of that eventful night. He had stopped for a little while to chat with some of the fellows in the Michaelis drug store at the corner of Pontiac and Lafayette streets, and had once more proceeded on his way when he made the observation concerning the odor of gasoline.

However, as he proceeded on down street, the rank odor of the explosive, inflammable product of the Standard Oil company became stronger and stronger. It was only after he had reached his destination and rang the door bell that he happened to place his hand in his overcoat pocket and the dampness and the unusual coolness of the evaporating liquid convinced him that someone had poured a goodly quantity of gasoline therein.

Mr. Junk declined to be interviewed on the point of how he managed to explain after he got indoors, but it is to be observed that he has steered since clear of the aforementioned drug store when en route to that also forementioned east-end home.

A GREAT NEW YEAR GIFT TO ALL AMERICAN WOMEN FROM MISS IDA TARBELL.

(Editor's Note—Of all living American women Ida M. Tarbell, investigator, author and historian, is perhaps the greatest student we have of contemporary life as related to womankind. So this paper asked Miss Tarbell to tell its readers what she would give the women of the United States for 1913, were it in her power to grant them some one thing. Would it be the vote, a minimum wage law or pensions for mothers? Here is her answer.)

(By Ida M. Tarbell.)

I am asked to say what I would wish most of all that the new year 1913 might bring to the women of America.

Would it be a vote, a pension for motherhood, or what?

Now, I take it that my answer must be something good, not only for the woman herself, but for society.

With this in mind then, what I would give to every woman in America, if I had the power, would be

A Consumer's Conscience.

As I see it, contentment in life depends to a large degree upon the way one handles his income. Micawber had a formula, you remember, which ran something like this:

Income 5 Pounds.
Expenditures 5 Pounds, 6 Pence.
RESULT—Misery.
Income 5 Pounds.
Expenditures 5 Pounds, Less 6 Pence.
RESULT—HAPPINESS.

Almost universally, American incomes are handled by American women. The money that men earn is spent by women. They have a power of tremendous public importance. It gives them the control, in the first place, of prices; that is, a control over the cost of living, and over many of those trusts and concerns which attempt to manipulate prices.

Nothing is commoner than to hear women claiming that if they had the vote they would settled this question of the cost of living. No doubt they would do their best. But the exercise of the vote without the exercise of the consuming power will never control prices.

The only effective control over artificial prices is for the public to refuse to pay them.

We, as consumers, overlook constantly the fact that there is practically nothing on the market which it is necessary for us to buy. No matter what the thing is, a substitute can always be found. I do not mean an imitation, I mean a substitute.

This has been proved again and again in times of war, of interrupted communications. The truth is, we are hopelessly conventional in our purchasing. Very few of us decide intelligently what we shall eat and wear.

We follow the custom, go on eating what is not good for us and wearing what we do not like—because it is approved by some mysterious outside power.

What we women need is a consumer's conscience, strong enough for us to break away from superstitions and traditions which drive us to buy goods whose prices are not within our means, or which have been driven up by some selfish, sinister manipulation.

MISS IDA TARBELL.

There is another point at which this consumer's conscience is needed today in this country, and where it can only be applied on a large scale and effectively by women, and that is in the matter of quality. The woman is the guardian of the quality of food, clothing, furniture and amusements.

Unless she has a conscience which is rigid in regard to quality, she does just so much to lower standards and to encourage the riot of adulterations and imitations which swamp us both in ugliness and debt.

A thing which is of poor quality is always a dear thing. Nobody can afford to buy it. Poor food is dear because it does not properly nourish. Poor clothing is dear because it does not properly warm and properly endure.

I should like to see the women of America resolutely refusing to buy shoddy goods.

I should like to see them scrutinizing every pound of groceries, on the ground that only pure foods are healthy foods, and adulterations are frauds.

That is the New Year gift which I should like to make to every American woman!

A CONSUMER'S CONSCIENCE.

I fully believe that if I could do this I would put her in the way of adding more to the present sum of peace on earth which we all so earnestly desire, than through any other single gift I could make her.

How Pinkerton Would Minimize Police Department Grafting.

WOULD HAVE BOARD

New York, Jan. 1.—"How to relieve the police department from grafting and reduce political influence" was the question that Allan Pinkerton, head of the Pinkerton detective agency, undertook to answer. He did not appear greatly flustered when asked the question, as might be expected considering the haze of mystery which is supposed to overhang the department, but he answered almost offhand:

"One of the best plans which I have yet heard of is to create a board of five police commissioners, each commissioner to give his exclusive time to police work. For this labor each should receive not less than $15,000 annually; each should serve five years, one to be appointed every year, the senior member to be president of the board.

"The commissioners should be chosen as follows: One by the chamber of commerce, one by the bar association, one by a federation of churches, one by the board of aldermen, and one elected by the members of the police department of the rank of captain and higher.

"This would make a board the majority of whom at all times would have full knowledge of police affairs. This board should appoint a police chief, who should be responsible to the board for the conduct of the entire department. The board should also appoint an assistant chief of police, who should constitute the head of the detective bureau of the five boroughs.

"Each borough should have a superintendent of police, who should be responsible to the chief of police for all police work in his borough. Each superintendent should have an assistant superintendent, who should be responsible for all the detective work in his borough."

Mr. Pinkerton went on to say that as many inspectors as are required should be appointed to each borough, and under them should be placed a certain number of captains, all of whom should be held entirely responsible for the law and order of their precincts and the honesty and efficiency of those under them, as well as know that every house and building in their precinct is used only for legitimate purposes.

Mr. Pinkerton laid particular stress on the matter of police transfers.

"There should be no such thing as transfer in the entire department. This favoritism should be discouraged. Inefficiency should result in demotion and reduction of pay; dismissal should result in all cases of dishonesty and neglect.

"The commission should be supplied with a fund of at least $50,000 to be applied at its discretion toward securing evidence of irregularities existing within the force. This fund should have a great influence toward forcing the captain to keep up the honesty and efficiency of his men and compelling them to maintain a clean precinct."

Mr. Pinkerton expressed himself as satisfied that what Mayor Gaynor has often reiterated regarding the superiority of the New York police force is absolutely correct. He said that no other city in the United States has a body of men approaching the calibre of the New York department, and he asserted that they are today doing the finest kind of work in the detection of crime and the maintenance of order.

"After talking with the police heads of nearly all the large cities, and with many others in a position to know, I am convinced," he said, "that the percentage of gambling houses and disorderly resorts is smaller here than in any other city approaching its size in the world, and cleaner by far than many other cities one-third its magnitude.

"There will always be instances of grafting in the department; but, considering the number of men employed, this is extremely small. They would not be relatively more honest if it were composed of lawyers, doctors, ministers, bankers and merchants."

Relative to the question of segregating questionable women, Mr. Pinkerton expressed himself as thoroughly in accord with the views of Mayor Gaynor. He did not think such a plan was practicable or advisable.

"The advent of the taxicab has doubtless led to a great increase in holdups and robberies," said Mr. Pinkerton. "For one thing, they are driven by a younger and more daredevil class of men than used to man the old nocturnal hack. Getaways are facilitated also, leading to the tendency to take chances on the part of a crook which he would never have dared take in the days of the horse-driven vehicle. But the manner in which those cases are rounded up by the police is admirable; the percentage of arrests made is much greater than the public generally believes.

"The recent publicity given the Rosenthal matter has attracted innumerable crooks and offenders to this city, who are led to believe that such bonds exist between the police and criminals as to make New York city a more wide-open, crime-ridden city than a Goldfield mining camp ever dreamed of being."

Persons troubled with partial paralysis are often very much benefited by massaging the affected parts thoroughly when applying Chamberlain's Liniment. This liniment also relieves rheumatic pains. For sale by all dealers.—Adv.

RUNNER IS HEAVYWEIGHT.

Northern California's Champion Sprinter Tips Scales at 366 Pounds.

Chico, Cal., Jan. 1.—The fattest boy for he is yet a boy—in northern California, and the fattest employe of the United States on the Pacific coast, celebrated his twenty-first birthday at his home in Yuba City. He is Reginald G. Kimball and he tips the scales at 366 pounds.

Kimball is employed by the government, carrying mail from the station to Yuba City and Marysville to the post-offices. He is also an employe of the Wells-Fargo company and it is said that he weighs as much as any other two employes of that company put together.

Kimball is of a normal stature and in addition to his weight he has gained distinction as a sprinter. He holds the record for a fifty-yard dash and has beaten scores of lightweights in the running game.

To fittingly celebrate his coming into his own, so far as age goes, he issued invitations to half a hundred friends to join him in a banquet and dance. His father and mother are of normal size.

Great secrecy is being maintained at the Brooklyn navy yard regarding a series of gyroscope tests which have been going on there for several months aboard the destroyer Worden. It is said that naval officials hope the experiments will solve the problem of preventing the rolling of a war vessel while under way or in a heavy sea.

What Of The New Year?

As you bid good-bye to 1912 with its experiences and its memories, its hopes, its joys, its disappointments and its successes, The Sentinel trusts that you may turn your face to the new year and welcome it with a smile that betokens a stout heart, a courageous hope and the fullest measure of confidence in the future. May it prove to each one of you unmeasured in happiness and prosperity and content.

Personal retrospection of the year just past may not be an altogether pleasant occupation. One can recall much of disappointment, much of miscalculation, much of failure of cherished hopes. But there will be lighter shades in the picture, also. There will be happiness and pleasure, the joy of real friendships, the encouragement of sympathetic and kindly interest and at least a moderate degree of material prosperity. Let these latter be appraised at their larger value. They will not only help to make smooth the rough places in the pathway but they will carry the year's balance to the right side of the ledger of life.

Analyzing it carefully, most of us will probably see in the year just gone a medley of strife and envy, of malice and hatred, of kindness and joy, of happiness and work, of love and smiles, of scowls and boasts, of slams and jabs, of grunts and cheers, of help and hurt, of pain and comfort, of misery and pleasure. And what of 1913? That will depend very largely on what each of us determines to put into the new year. This newest of Time's progeny today waves us a smiling welcome. Let's smile back at him! This is a mighty good place in which to begin a new year, and a better one in which to live it through. And as we start the trip together, permit The Sentinel to express again its hope that yours may be a very happy new year.

Official changes at the county building coming with the new year will mark the passing of a number of men who have made splendid public records, and the incoming of their successors who give every promise of equally efficient and popular administrations. Commissioner John B. Wyss has been of immense value to Allen county as a member of the board, and he retires with well-earned honors, to be succeeded by William C. Schwier. Sheriff Reichelderfer, after an excellent administration covering four years, is succeeded by A. C. Gladieux. Recorder Robert E. Kelly, another efficient public servant, gives way to Allen Hursh, who is fully expected to measure up to the place admirably, while Treasurer Bueter begins his second official term, to which he was elected a few weeks ago. In recent years Allen county has exercised splendid judgment in the selection of her officials, and the result has been a generally high grade administration of county affairs.

Let us hope that the hold-up men who have been rather aggressive in Fort Wayne the past few days are among those who solemnly subscribed to a good resolution or two today and have "sworn off" relieving inoffensive citizens of their valuables when they chance to meet them on the streets after nightfall.

The reception accorded it in Fort Wayne last night ought to have removed any last lingering doubt that may have been entertained by 1913 as to its welcome in this town.

OUR MINOR PRODUCTS.

(Indianapolis Star.)

In the forthcoming report of the department of agriculture, touching Indiana crop returns for the year 1910, some interesting figures are given on the subject of the minor products of the state. For example, the total number of fowls on farms in April, 1910, was almost 14,000,000. Of the more than 200,000 farms reporting fowls there were 15,753 which made no report on eggs produced, but the eggs actually reported were 70,734,000 dozen, valued at more than fifteen and a half million dollars!

On casual thought one would not suspect such an enormous production of eggs nor the great value of this by-product. It is generally conceded that egg production in Indiana in the last two years has been the greatest in the history of the state. There are several plants in operation that make a specialty of egg production. With the present farm value of eggs this item alone, for the year just closing, will add enormously to the wealth of the state—to the profits for the year.

The potato crop in Indiana for 1912 is the largest ever grown, and while prices probably are not as high as in 1910, the value of the crop will far exceed that of 1910, which was approximately $11,000,000. Then there is the strawberry crop, which is classed by the department as being one of the most valuable of the smaller crops of the state, valued in 1910 at about a half million dollars. Orchard fruits totaled almost $4,000,000, as shown by the final report of 1909.

These figures are of interest to citizens of the state, inasmuch as they all show great gains in all items of productions over the ten-year report of 1899. Reports for the year 1911 are not available, as the government is far behind in its compilations, but they, no doubt, would show substantial gains over any other year in the history of the state.

THE PRESS DISCUSSES THE CASE OF CASTRO.

"Only a Flea Bite."

Boston Globe: "Castro ought to be admitted and allowed to go as far as he likes. He can do nothing to us, nor is it likely that he can do anything for us. A man of his type need not alarm us. He is only a flea bite at his worst, and he is never at his best."

"Height of Effrontery."

Washington Star: "In view of Cipriano Castro's outrageous treatment of Americans and American interests in his own country in the days of his power, it is the height of effrontery for him now to seek admittance."

"His Moral Status."

Philadelphia Bulletin: "And while there may be two opinions as to Cipriano Castro's moral status and, perhaps a negative deficiency, there is no obvious defect which can be established as a ban."

"International Pariah."

Philadelphia Ledger: "Doubtless to Cipriano Castro will be extended every encouragement to continue on his solitary way, the international pariah, 'the man without a country.' He deserves his fate."

"Like Any Other Foreign Citizen."

Pittsburg Post: "Technically there is no charge against Cipriano Castro. He is coming like any other foreign citizen; a man without a home, repelled in Europe, he has turned in the direction of the only country that has ever been willing to offer an asylum to the worthy."

"Wisdom of Justness."

Wilmington Every Evening: "We do not want fellows of Castro's stripe, and there will be no disposition to question the wisdom or justness of the decision of the port officials should it be against his admission."

THE FACTORIES OF MANHATTAN.

(Kansas City Star.)

On the very small island of Manhattan 150,000 garment workers are to strike. A startling thing it is that this little island, with all the rest it holds, contains the greatest number of factories, employing the largest number of workers, of any city in the United States, perhaps in the world.

Of course this means that factories go up in the air ten to twenty and more stories high. It means quite inevitably that a great number of men, women and children must work in dangerous and crowded, if not necessarily insanitary quarters.

With all our means of quick transportation and communication it would seem that this is a wholly needless congestion. Why should there be a factory on Manhattan, where such space as there is needed for homes and stores and the numberless other houses, besides factory lofts, which the great city demands?

WOMAN JURY STICKS HER.

Kansas Deliberators Give Man Plaintiff $1,200 Damages.

Eldorado, Kan., Jan. 1.—After three and a half hours' deliberation the first woman jury in this county returned a verdict for the plaintiff in the sum of $1,200 in the case of H. H. Boecke against Carrie M. Schrieber and others for damages.

At a previous term of court this case was tried before a jury of men and the jury disagreed.

ON THE FIRST DAY OF THE GLAD NEW YEAR

Society

The Beta Phi Sigma dance, which took place at the Anthony hotel last evening, closed a series of beautiful dancing parties that have engrossed the attention of the younger society crowd, both of visitors as well as the college boys and girls home for the holidays. The Subscription and Charity balls were as elaborate as any ever given in the city and much praise has been given to the chairmen of committees on arrangements for both affairs. The fraternity dance last evening was largely attended. The decorations were not specially elaborate, but they were fitting for the night and equally effective as a setting for the many lovely colors seen in the costumes. A fraternity seal formed of electric lights was an attractive symbol of the dance and programs were embossed with insigna of the fraternity. There were about three hundred young people in attendance. Ashbaugh's orchestra furnished delightful music for dancing.

AFTERNOON TEA GOWN IN A GOLDEN TONE OF PANNE VELVET.

Although we hear that the rage for yellow is decreasing we see no signs of it as yet. At every afternoon tea or reception we find at least one-third of the women wearing gowns of some shade of yellow.

The illustration shows an afternoon dress of gold colored panne velvet made in that delusive style that is so popular at present—a style that looks as though it were very full, but which is quite as narrow as ever.

The skirt of this frock is slightly gathered about the waist and is caught up at the side just over the front with buttons. The waist is cut with the long shoulder and is fastened across the front with another group of buttons and buttonholes that match those on the skirt. These buttons are of clouded amber. There is a slit cut across the right side of the waist and in it is inserted a triangular piece of lace. Little triangles of the same lace form the trimming on the long sleeves.

Under the panne skirt there is a very narrow petticoat of gold satin trimmed with marten fur. The satin also is used for the belt and for the bow, which is tied below the marten collar. The hat worn with this gown is of plush, the color of the marten fur, and it is trimmed with a beautiful bird of paradise in the natural shades.

AT THE MAJESTIC.

"Bunty Pulls the Strings."

"Bunty Pulls the Strings," the attraction at the Majestic this afternoon and evening, should be one of those comedies which appeals to all. The scenes are laid in the early sixties when beaver hats, hoop skirts and other quaint costumes were the fashion. The comedy is more a series of incidents in the life of a small village in the interior of Scotland. The play has had an unusually long run in all the large cities where it has been seen and judging from the interest shown in advance here should prove to be as huge a success.

FLOWERS INDOORS.

When flowers die indoors it is time for the occupants of the room or the house to investigate the temperature, the moisture and the sunlight possibilities of that habitation.

From the health standpoint, as well as the aesthetic standpoint, people should have plants in their offices and living rooms. Where animals are, plants are needed to obtain an atmospheric balance.

Plants take up moisture from the earth and feed it to the air through their leaves. When air conditions are so wrong in a room that the plant dies in it, it is time for the inmates to move out or alter the conditions.

Often a woman complains because her potted plants die soon after bringing them in in the most perfect state of health, from the greenhouse. If she takes the trouble to go back to the florist, she will probably find that the greenhouse temperature is kept at about 70; the ground is fairly moist and the plant is getting some sunlight every day. The humidity is probably nearly ninety.

Going home and applying the various tests to her room where the plant has been living, she will find, perhaps, that the temperature is about 80 and the humidity 20 or 25. Possibly the sunlight never touches the plant at all.

If she modifies these conditions the plant will probably live. She can reduce the temperature as low as 70. But she will not be able to raise the humidity much above 40 or 46.

TO MAKE GLASS TRAYS.

The little glass covered trays which are so popular just now form attractive gifts, and can be made at home at little cost by the clever fingered woman. First she must look out for picture frames of suitable size and shape. These are often to be found in shops which deal in cheap goods, surrounding some worthless picture, or there may be some lurking in attic or lumber room in which one's own family has no further interest.

Remove the pictures from these frames and fit a piece of gay cretonne or embroidery under the glass. Replace the back and glue a piece of green felt or baize, which will at once make the tray neat and prevent it from scratching the surfaces on which it is placed. Little brass handles, which can be bought at a hardware shop, will make a pretty finish if the additional expense need not be considered.

Shabby frames should be stained black or enamelled white before the cretonne is put in. A piece of lace mounted over an appropriate color, or a tray in which the chintz of the bed hangings and curtains appears, are both dainty and economical to use as brush trays on a dressing table.

HELPFUL HINTS.

To remove bones from either fresh or salt fish, while raw, take the headless fish in the left hand, split down the back; with the right thumb carefully push the meat from the flesh side of the backbone, then gently force the thumb between the backbone and the skin of the fish from head to tail; now gently pull sidewise and the ribs adhering to the backbone will come out with it. All the remaining bones can be removed by catching them between the thumb and the sharp blade of a knife. If the fish are salt they must be freshened before being boned.

A good way to clean a carpet sweeper is to remove the brush, and after rubbing off all the hairs and lint rub it well with kerosene. Let the brush remain in the air until all the odor has evaporated. The sweeper will leave the carpets and rugs looking much brighter after this treatment.

BIGGEST EVENT OF 1913 WILL BE THE OPENING OF THE PANAMA CANAL, SAYS MR. BARRETT.

(Editor's Note—The greatest world event of 1913 will be the opening of the Panama canal—our canal. Ships will pass through it before another twelvemonth is gone. What does the canal mean to us? The Daily Sentinel asked a man whose business it is to study such big topics to tell. Here's his answer.

JOHN BARRETT.

BY JOHN BARRETT,
Director General of the Pan American Union.

There is not a state, city, town or hamlet of the United States which should not be interested in the Panama canal and in Pan American commerce.

It behooves the American people en masse to be studying every phase of the Panama canal, to be investigating what it leads to, what it expects, and what other countries are planning to do with and through it.

Every university, every college, every preparatory and grammar school, and every academy should have part of its annual course devoted to the canal, and to the effect that it will have upon the power, standing and responsibilities of the United States.

Every chamber of commerce and every commercial, civil, literary, educational and social society should devote special sessions to discussing the Panama canal, what it is and what it means.

If this is not done, we are going to be terribly disappointed at the results which will come from the canal after it is opened. We are going to be surprised that our harbors and ports are not filled with more vessels doing business through the canal. We are going to be chagrined that our manufacturing plants are not supplying more orders coming from the fields and markets reached through the canal.

As the minister of the United States in both Asiatic and Latin American countries, I have been overwhelmed with the vastness of what I might call the Pan-Pacific and Pan-American opportunity for the United States, but I have also realized that other countries of the world are investigating these opportunities and preparing to use the Panama canal to reach them.

A few remarkable and concrete facts must convince the most skeptical person of the importance of the canal. The foreign trade of all the countries bordering on the Pacific ocean, including Canada, the Pacific coast of the United States, Mexico, Central America, South America, Australasia and Asia amounts to nearly $3,000,000,000. Heretofore Europe has had via Suez the advantage over the entire Atlantic and Gulf coast and central western section of the United States in reaching these markets. After the canal is opened two-thirds of the population of the United States and five-fifths of its manufacturing interests will have a shorter route by water to this mighty trade than will Europe.

The whole gulf and Atlantic coast of the United States and the country back of it will be able to reach the Pacific markets of Mexico, Guatemala, Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Panama, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia and Chile by a comparatively short and convenient route.

The Panama canal will shorten the route from Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Charleston, Mobile, New Orleans and Galveston to Valparaiso, Callao, Guayaquil, Panama, Corinto and other ports of the western coast of Central America and Mexico by distances averaging from 3,000 to 12,000 miles.

The twelve countries of Latin American bordering on the Pacific ocean last year without the canal did an annual Pacific trade of nearly $500,000,000—an increase of nearly 100 per cent, in ten years. It is reasonable to argue that when the canal is opened that trade will grow in a decade to $1,000,000,000 or even $1,500,000,000. Of this the United States should have the major portion.

Now a word about all Latin America—the twenty countries which with the United States form the Pan American union.

These countries cover an area of 9,000,000 square miles or three times that of the United States proper. They have now a population of 70,000,00. They conducted last year a foreign trade of $2,500,000,000—an increase of nearly 100 per cent in ten years.

If the twenty countries of Latin America can maintain a trade of this kind before the canal is opened they certainly will astonish the world by what they can do when the world realizes their importance and their value, and they themselves are making use of the canal.

FACTS ABOUT WHOOPING COUGH.

(By a Physician.)

Whooping cough is a contagious disease characterized by fits of coughing during which a whooping or crowding sound is made following a long-drawn breath. It is generally taken through direct contact with the sick, rarely through exposure to the sick room, or to persons or clothing used by the sick. The germ which causes the disease is probably in the mucus of the nose and throat.

It occurs chiefly in children from six months to six years of age. And as there are many cases of it being reported this time of the year to the health officers, a little talk on the subject may not be amiss.

Whooping cough begins like an ordinary cold in the head, with a cough, worse at night, which persists. As the coughing fits increase the child gets red in the face, has difficulty in getting breath, and sometimes vomits when the attack is over.

After a variable period from a few days to two weeks, the peculiar feature of the disease appears. The child gives 15 or 20 short coughs without drawing breath; the face swells and grows blue; the eyeballs protrude; the veins stand out, and the patient appears to be suffocating, when at last he draws in a long breath with a crowing or whooping sound, which gives rise to the name of the disease. In mild cases there may be six to twelve attacks in twenty-four hours; in severe cases, from forty to eighty.

Owing to the numerous complications, whooping cough must be looked upon as a serious disease, especially in infants under two years, and in weak, delicate children. It causes about one-fourth of all deaths among children and for this reason a physician's services should be secured when possible.

A host of remedies is used for whooping cough, but no single one is always the best.

Fresh air is of great importance. Patients should be strictly isolated in rooms by themselves. And children should be sent away who have not been exposed.

If the coughing fits are severe, or there is fever, children should be kept in bed. Otherwise they may be outdoors in warm weather, and also in winter on warm, quiet days.

It is best that the sick should have two rooms so that the temperature may be kept at 70 all the time and the air changed frequently. Especially at night should the child have plenty of fresh air to breathe.

The simplest remedy for the disease, before the whooping has commenced, is a mixture of paregoric and syrup of ipecac, ten drops of the former, with five of the latter, for a child of two years, given together in water every three hours.

A one per cent solution of hydrogen dioxide, diluted with four parts of water, used in an atomizer for spraying the throat every two hours, has given good results.

Quinine, given in the dose of one-sixth grain for each month of the child's age under a year, or in one and one-half grain doses for each year of age under five, is one of the older and more valuable remedies. It should be given three times a day in pill with jelly, or solution in water.

However, these drugs should only be employed under the direction of the physician.

During a fit of coughing and whooping it is well to support the child's head. If he ceases to breathe he should be slapped over the face and chest with a towel wet with cold water.

Interference with sleep caused by coughing, and loss of proper nourishment through vomiting, lead to wasting and debility. Teaspoonful doses of emulsion of cod liver oil, three times daily, after eating, are often useful in convalescence.

Great care must be taken at this time to prevent exposure and pneumonia. Change of air frequently hastens recovery greatly in the later stages.

BOOTS AND SHOES.

Much more care and thought should be bestowed on the wearing of boots and shoes and taking care of them. Many are allowed to run down at the heel or sag at the side. The short skirt demands attention on all these points.

Different leathers and colors are combined in fashionable footgear. Patent leather with suede vamps for boots and buttons, the pearl button dyed to match the suede, are well worn. Black Russian leather with kid tops is another feature. Black is more fashionable than tan. Only for rough weather tan shoes find favor. Rhinestone studded velvet slippers for evening wear have a great effect, and heels are sometimes thickly studded in the same way. Rhinestone buckles are a fashionable embellishment.

Black satin evening shoes are, after all, the most popular, but they must be of the best cut and shape, with a tiny rhinestone button. White satin with colored heels is coming in for dancing.

RETURN OF THE DOLMAN.

From somewhere on the ashes of other dead things there has returned to us the dolman. Not precisely the model of the eighties, but with some similitude to that wrap—the adored of the middle-aged—fashioned in broche or velvet. For the revival, velvet is the chosen fabric, preferably in a vivid tone, tempered by a collar of dark fur, the pelt, however, not occurring elsewhere.

They are quite a full half length, are these dolmans, and the sleeves emerge mysteriously from the back, being carried to within a short distance of the wrist, and then caught into a modish cuff. One reason—and it seems to be a good one—given for the reappearance of the manteau, is the affinity it bears to the panniered gown, the two marrying most happily.

WASHING STOCKINGS.

Colored stockings, especially those of delicately tinted silk, require careful washing.

Prepare a lather, using pure white soap and soft warm water. A little salt added will keep the color from fading. Rub the stockings gently with the hands and when perfectly clean rinse through several waters. Wring as dry as possible, then wrap in a cloth and wring again. Hang in the air and dry quickly. Press on the wrong side with a warm iron. This preserves the soft sheen of new stockings.

TO CLEAN VELVET.

Stretch the velvet tautly, pile side upward, over a basin of boiling water. As the steam rises through the velvet get a second person to brush up the pile briskly with a stiff whisk. If the material is really dirty and not merely crushed and flattened, sponge it lightly with benzine, taking care that there is no artificial light or fire in the room in which the operation is performed, and also that there is no draught leading to an apartment containing heat or light of any kind.

Bluffton Mayor Sends Drunken Blacksmith to Jail—Township Provides for Family.

Bluffton, Ind., Jan. 1.—Bert Minniear was before Mayor Frank Smith and drew one of the most severe sentences that has been imposed in a long time for an intoxication charge, but Minniear probably had "it coming to him," because of his almost continuous appearance in the police spotlight. Mayor Smith fined him $5 and costs, a total of $15, and then added a thirty-day jail sentence for good measure, a total of forty-five days in the county jail.

Minniear begged to be let off easier, but from what the officers could ascertain Minniear's four children are afraid of him, and as his wife is absent on a visit in Ohio it was deemed best to have him safely in custody at least until after her return to this city. She is expected home next Sunday. Minniear's children are remaining at home keeping house by themselves while waiting for their mother. The two older children told teh officers that they had enough in the house in the way of provisions to last them until today, and the township trustee will be asked to assist them until their mother returns come and further steps are decided upon.

Minniear is a blacksmith by trade. He is capable of earning good wages, but booze eats up both his time and his money.

Calendary

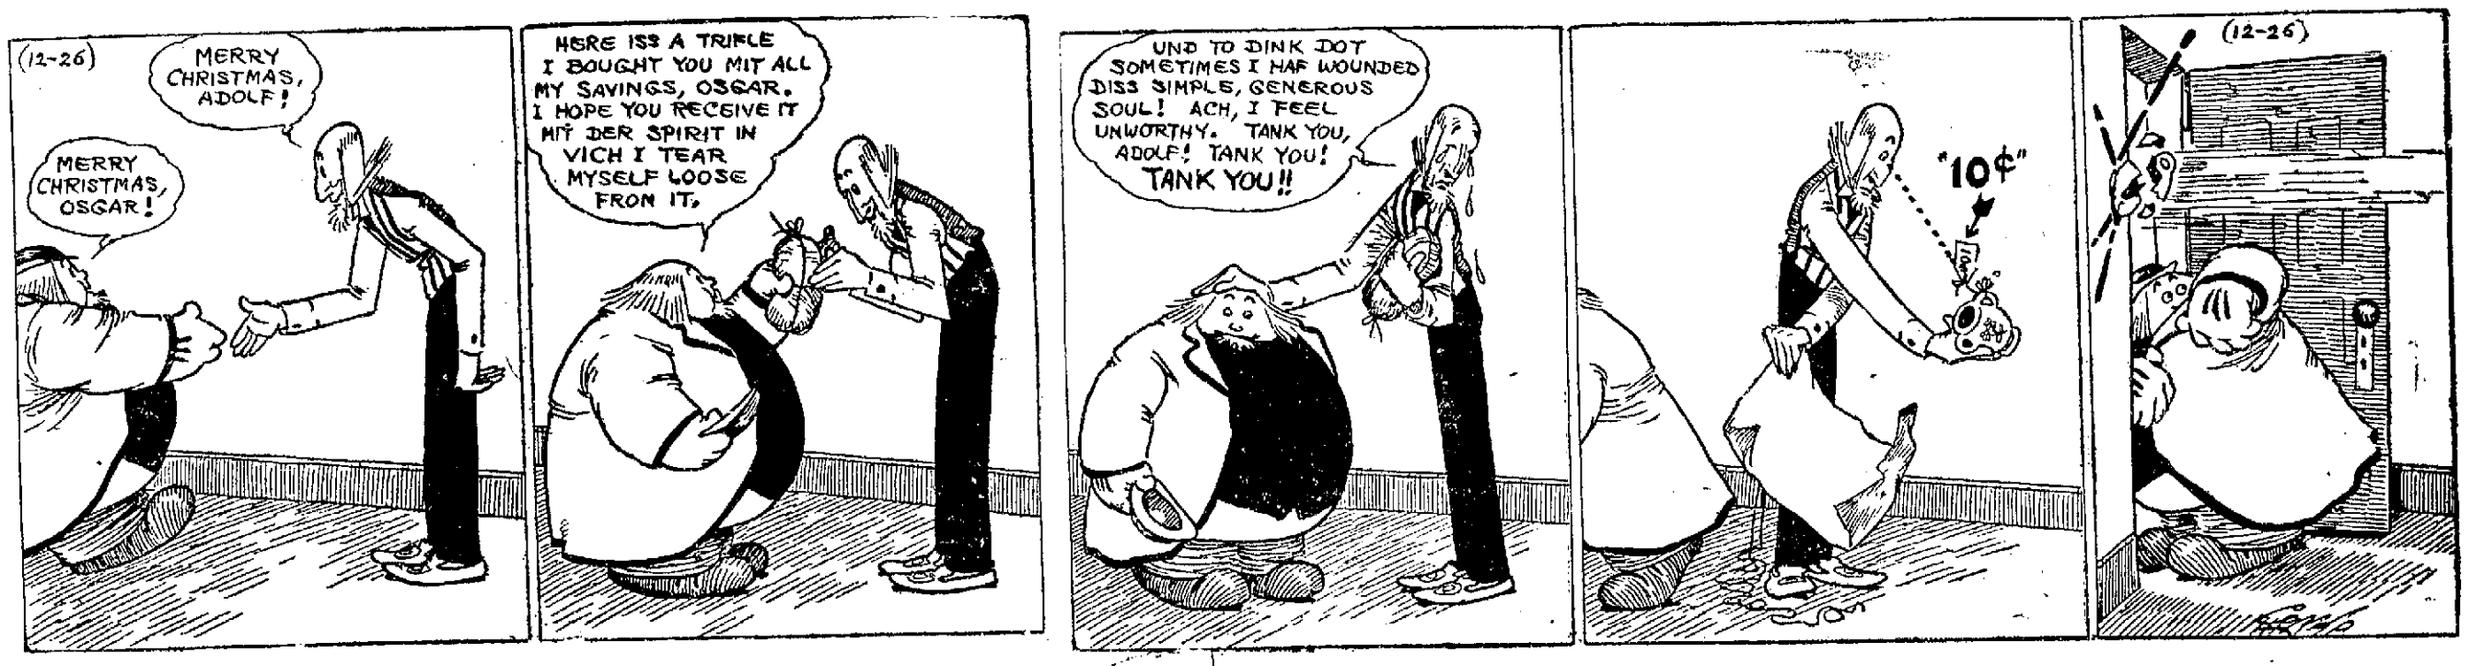

By BERTON BRALEY.

Oh, my uncles and my cousins and my relatives by dozens
And my comrades and acquaintances galore.
And my butcher and my baker and my special candlemaker
And the owner of the corner grocery store,
And the man who tries endurance as he seeks to sell insurance
And the druggist—he's a busy little bee—
And the banker and the brewer and some fifty more, I'm sure,
Have been giving many calendars to me!

They are lithographed and tinted, they are much embossed and printed
They are every sort and species which is made.
Some are really very sumptuous and could be considered scrumptuous
And the others merely advertise for trade,
I have hung 'em many places where the walls have offered spaces,
I have cluttered up my home and office, too.
And of course they're very handy—and more permanent than candy—
But—I wish my friends could think of something new!

STRUCK OUT THE LEADER OF TEAM

Mathewson Had Test When He Was Only Twelve Years Old.

KEPT RIGHT AT WORK

How Mathewson became a big league pitcher is a story of athletic romance rapid and romantic enough to heighten the wildest flights of imagination of those youngsters who dream of fame as a ball tosser. At an age when most ambitious ball players are just learning to swing a bat, he was playing real ball in a team in one of the minor leagues and during that period he was invariably playing with and against men who were older both in years and experience.

His soundest advice to an aspiring pitcher is that upon which his own success was founded—control of the ball.

He freely admits that his early determination not to sacrifice control to any other element of the game has had an important bearing upon his career. How he practiced throwing stones merely for amusement in the town of Factoryville, Pa., when he was 9 years old; how he pitched balls all day long at a companion who stood up against a barn, are incidents of his early training which he delights in relating.

He was mascot of the town team. He chased all the wild fouls that no one else was willing to run after. He practiced pitching "ins," "outs" and "drops." Three years later, when the Factoryville pitcher failed to show up for a game, he had his first opportunity to play ball.

It was not without a test, however. The team was composed of big, brawny men, who had enjoyed all the hero worshipping that Factoryville could give them. These players acted as critics while "that Mathewson kid" pitched for two solid hours. After the best batsmen of the town had been stacked up against him he succeeded in fanning out the captain. He also won the game for his team.

Next fall found him playing second base on the team of Keystone academy and the following year at the age of 14 he was captain. One thing worried him however. He was "cross-handed" in hitting, even if he did have good control of his curves, and he set himself to work correcting his style. When vacation time came around he returned to Factoryville and pitched for the team, but he was soon bought by a rival team in a nearby town, receiving exactly $1 a game and playing with the big grown-ups.

Graduating from Keystone in '08, he went to Bucknell college. While in Scranton that summer, a Y. M. C. A. game in which he struck out fifteen men did much to focus attention upon him and when he later went to Honesville, Pa., he was given $20 a month and his board to pitch for the town team.

Before the season was ended he was offered $90 a month to pitch for the Taunton club in the New England league but this club desbanded and he returned to Honesville, which place, Mathewson says, became an important milepost in his career. It is here that he discovered and practiced the "fadeaway," which later became of great value to him and he also ceased to hit "cross-handed."

In the fall of the year, returning to Bucknell, he played full back upon the college football team, as a member of which he was then more widely known than as a base ball player. This was due to his ability as a drop-kicker. In fact, during a football game with the University of Pennsylvania he scored two field goals and his work brought him to the attention of "Phenom" John Smith, former manager of a New England league club. Smith signed him up in the Virginia league with the Norfolk club.

Mathewson went back to Bucknell when the football game was ended, proud of his score in collegiate football, and with a contract to play base ball for Norfolk at $90 per month. His season at this club was equally brilliant. Twenty-one games out of twenty-three were placed to his credit.

This was the last minor league record "Phenom" John Smith had the opportunity to sell him to the New York Nationals or to the Philadelphia club and he gave him his choice. He decided on the Giants because he believed there was a greater opportunity and he became a big league pitcher when he was just 19 years old. The brilliant work he has done since 1900 is a matter of vivid recollection to every base ball fan.

ARGUMENT FOR MOTORS.

Costs Lots of Money to Keep Horses in Fire Department.

Each horse in the city fire department was maintained last year at an expense of $117.29, according to the figures compiled by Winifred Scalding, clerk to the board of public safety. Fifty-three ate 25,257 pounds of hay, or $2,417.55 worth, the bill for each being $54.61, representing the cost of 4,778.71 pounds of hay. All ate 2,360 bushels of oats, costing $2,501.90, or $47.22 each for the 1915 bushels each horse ate. There were eighty-nine pounds of corn eaten, $53.34, or $1.01 for each horse. The horses consumed thirty-five bushels of bran at $17.50, or 33 cents for each. The harness repair bills for the department were $91.30, horseshoeing $767.50, sawdust bedding bills $266.60, making a total of $6,215.89.

SHOW A FALLING OFF.

The market receipts for 1912 amounted to $2,571.15, as compared with $3,598.30 for 1911. In 1912 a charge of $25 was put on the stands and the street collection was 25 cents a day. Last year the stands cost $15 and the daily collections were 15 cents. The market receipts for December last year amounted to $58.10.

ORDERS TO REPORT.

McGraw Will Have Advance Guard Start in February.

New York, Jan. 1. Manager McGraw of the Giants, today gave an order to twelve young players to report to him at Marlin Springs, Tex., on Feb. 15. Nine of these new men are pitchers, two are infielders and one an outfielder. It is also reported that McGraw will have several regulars on hand at the same time to help put the new talent to a thorough test. On Feb. 28 McGraw will have the regulars headed for the training camp.

The New York players will remain in Marlin until the last week in March, and then, divided into two teams, they will work their way home, playing exhibition games with the Southern league and American association teams.

GRIFFITH IS SURPRISED.

Finds He Has an Infielder in Man He Signed for Gardener.

Washington, Jan. 1.—Clark Griffith was handed an agreeable surprise the other day. He learned that Joe Gideon, drafted from San Francisco, is not an outfielder as he thought but a second baseman, having been recommended to him because of his ability at the second sack.

Washington is pretty well heeled for outfielders with Milan, Moeller and Shanks as veterans, and Welchance and Calvo for recruits. At second Morgan and La Porte have been the weak spots of the team, and Grif has hopes of Gideon.

WILL NOT USE LEACH.

Old Pittsburg Player Is Not Considered by Evers.

Chicago, Jan. 1.—Tommy Leach will not be retained by Manager Evers of the Cubs. Leach's legs went back on him last summer and put him on the bench. Perhaps Manager Tinker, of the Cincinnati Reds, will try him, but that is extremely doubtful. Two years ago Leach, then with the Pirates, was in great demand.

FANS TO CHOOSE MANAGER.

Officials of the Danville club in the Three-I league, being unable to select a manager, plan to have the fans elect one. Eight candidates will be put up and the office will go to the one getting the biggest vote.

JIM THORPE WAS NEARLY ALL OF THE HISTORY OF ATHLETIC SPORT DURING THE YEAR THAT H AS JUST CLOSED.

The sport history of 1912 can be written in two words—Jim Thorpe.

Thorpe won the decathlon and the pentathlon for Uncle Sam at the Olympic games in Sweden.

He won the amateur all-around championship of the United States.

He captained the Carlisle eleven and has been picked as the greatest half back of modern times.

He is a real American.

Of course a few other things, more or less important, happened in the sporting world, for instance:

Boston won the world's base ball series.

Harvard won the eastern football championship.

Frank Gotch remains wrestling champion.

Abe Attell lost the featherweight boxing championship to Johnny Kilbane.

Billy Papke won the middleweight boxing championships of England and France.

Ad Wolgast lost the lightweight boxing championship to Willie Ritchie.

Uncle Sam won the Olympic games.

England won the International Motor Boat championship.

Ralph de Palma won the Vanderbilt cup race.

Caleb Bragg won the Grand Prix automobile race.

Vedrines won the Gordon Bennett aeroplane race.

Wisconsin won the western football championship.

Luther McCarthy defeated Jim Flynn in the heavyweight boxing elimination.

England won the Dwight tennis trophy from Australia.

Mrs. H. H. D. Britton, owner of the St. Louis Nationals, discharged Manager Bresnahan, and Bresnahan demanded $40,000 salary.

Chicago, Cincinnati, Detroit, New York and Akron participated in the biggest base ball deal on record, out of which Joe Tinker became Cincinnati manager and Frank Chance was given his unconditional release.

The new year looms up full of promise. The first tap of the baby's gong brings Luther McCarthy and Al Palzer into the ring to make a heavy weight champion.

The National league championship seems to lie between New York and Pittsburg.

In the American league Boston and the Athletics are favored to win.

Increased interest will be shown in yachting on both coasts and Great Lakes as a consequence of Lipton's visit.

The middleweight boxing championship will be settled between Papke and McGoorty.

The United States will make a bid to recapture the Gordon Bennett aviation trophy.

England and the United States will struggle for the polo championship.

The United States will try to win back the International Motor Boat trophy.

JIM THORPE.

BYRON IS SMALL BUT NOT AFRAID

New National League Umpire is in Featherweight Class.

HE USES BIG VOICE

New York, Jan. 1.—If Umpire Bill Bryon, signed by President Thomas J. Lynch for the National league staff, brings with him one-half the pugnaciousness that writers on the International league circuit give him credit for there will be more lively times on the big league diamonds next summer.

This is what they say about the new umpire:

"Do you know there's going to be some fun in Lynch's circuit when Bryon gets started. He's a little chap, small and insignificant looking, and the umpire baiters of the big show will look on him as easy meat, especially if they are not forewarned. Bryon is the most docile looking little chap imaginable. He stands about five feet and weighs a shade over 110 pounds, perhaps 111, but he sure has nerve.

"I can picture in my mind's eye the scene when this little mite of a man gets into his first argument with any of the managers or players who take delight in hopping on an umpire's neck. Unless some kind hearted friend has tipped them off in advance that Bryon is just the opposite of what he looks they're going to get the surprise of their young lives.

"One of Bryon's chief assets is his voice, and he's never afraid to use it. Not content with merely making himself heard when he wishes to answer a player's argument, he walks up to the man and bellows the words into his face. Wait till Johnny Evers starts anything with Bryon."

FIND THREE SLAIN.

Horrible Triple Murder Is Uncovered at Tupelo, Miss.

Tupelo, Miss., Jan. 1.—Servants at work in the hotel conducted by Cady Wiygul at Fulton, Miss., yesterday found the bodies of Wiygul and his wife lying on the floor of their apartment, and that of their adopted son, Purd Wiygul, in an adjoining room. Apparently they had been dead several hours. Mrs. Wiygul and the boy had been shot to death and the elder Wiygul's throat was slashed. Two knives and a pistol were found beside the body of the hotel keeper.

COMPANIONS RAN AWAY.

Paul Johnson Breaks Through Ice and Drowns at Lafayette.

Lafayette, Ind., Jan. 1.—Paul Johnson, 19, while skating at Columbian park yesterday afternoon broke through the ice and was drowned. He went into twelve feet of water. His companions ran away from the scene of the accident when he disappeared under the ice.

WALK CHALK LINE FOR BED.

Cleveland Lodging Seekers Must Toe Literal Mark.

Cleveland, O., Jan. 1. Applicants for a night's lodging hereafter must be able to walk a literal chalk line—a white streak across an eighteen-foot room—before there is any shelter for them at the Wayfarers' lodge of the Associated Charities here.

Superintendent Howell Wright of the Associated Charities instituted the custom when he refused lodging to a tramp from Philadelphia because he wavered from the narrow path.

Wright said he believes the custom should become general and that applicants who are unable to negotiate the feat in proof of their sobriety will be turned out in the cold. The more serious cases will be given to the police.

ART SCHWIND TO GET CHANCE.

Boston Has Sold Him to Buffalo but Holds an Option.

Art Schwind, local player recommended to Claude H. Varnell by Secretary Bert Dennis, and signed and sent to Ottawa last spring, has been sold on an optional agreement by the Boston Nationals to the Buffalo club of the International league.

A year ago this young Fort Wayne player was practically unknown. He had not even gained any prominence as an amateur player, but he jumped in and in a season attracted major league attention. He is hardly seasoned for Class AA and there is still a possibility that he may play at short for the local club next year.

FOUR KILLED BY TRAIN.

Kansas Family In Buggy Nearly Wiped Out in Crossing Tragedy.

Belleville, Kan., Jan. 1.—Four persons, Wilson James, wife and two children, were killed near here last night by a Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific passenger train which struck a buggy in which they were riding.

Engineer Laird said he did not know his train had killed anyone till he reached here.

Part of a little girl's head with a bit of blue ribbon tied to the hair was found when the engine was being oiled. Soon afterward there came the news that the buggy had been struck. A switch engine was sent back and picked up the bodies.

The mother, a two-months-old baby and a three-year-old girl were killed instantly. The father was breathing when picked up but died shortly afterward. Two boys, 8 and 13 years, are the only surviving members of the family.

Business Manager of St. Mary's Team Gives Up the Reins.

Clarence L. Alter, business manager for several years of the basket ball team of St. Mary's Athletic club, has tendered his resignation and has been succeeded by H. J. Wiegand. During his connection with the club Mr. Alter was a hustling and capable manager and his associates regret that his duties interfere with his regular work to such an extent that he was not able to continue them.

ATTORNEY MAKES EDUCATION WORK

Legal Attainments Help Out Umpire Rigler Before League.

WILL CHANGE HOME

Attorney Charles Rigler, who is also an umpire in the National league, and whose first professional performance as an arbiter was staged in Fort Wayne, made the legal education he has been absorbing at the Virginia law school work when he forced the Philadelphia club to pay him $2,200 balance due for Eppy Rixey.

Rigler has made his home at Massilon for a number of years, and has helped Wee Willie Robertson, former Fort Wayne pitcher, make the town famous, but this is all over now as the feminine half of the Rigler life sketch is ready to move to Cleveland and this means a change of residence for the umpire-attorney.

For the past four years Rigler has been attending the law school at the University of Virginia and incidentally coaching the college baseball team in baseball and arguing with the umpire. He used the McGraw system on the boys and as a result Virginia has been turning out star baseball teams since Rigler assumed charge of the coaching department.

That Rigler's course in law was a wise one was proven at the recent meeting of the National league in New York. While at Virginia Rigler developed Eppy Rixey, who was one of the star southpaws of the older organization last year. Being a good business man, Rigler secured permission from President Lynch to dispose of his crack collegian. The Philadelphia Nationals took him at $2,500. Of this amount Rigler received $200 and at the recent meeting put in a plea for the remaining $2,200, which he received.

After granting Rigler his rights in the case the board decided that no umpire in the National league could in the future act as a party in any such deals. In reply to this decision Rigler remarked that he had a college infielder under his wing who would horn up the big show. Since his league, which he desired to be loyal to, had passed a rule preventing him from disposing of the player, he stated that it would become his plain duty to negotiate with the American league.

"What do you think happened as a result of my little speech?" said Rigler. "Nothing much, only that by the time I reached the lobby of the hotel four eastern league managers grabbed me and tried to make a deal for my college infielder. I asked them how they got wise to the fact and they told me that they had been asked to do business with me for several of the national league clubs. Rather amusing incident."

FRIARS WILL BE THERE TO BOOST

Expect to Attend the Opening Game and Root for Team.

ALL SET FOR GAME

Just by way of encouraging the members of the club who have been working hard for several weeks to get into shape for the opening number of the basket ball schedule, the Friars will attend the game at Library hall tonight in a body to root for their team which is booked to battle a picked team of St. Joseph's college students.

Loyalty is one of the cardinal principles of the Friar club and this has so often been proven in the football clashes that the announcement of a turnout means there will be some tall hustling to start their representatives in the game with a victory.

Seating and lighting conditions at Library hall are ideal for the game and the big cage constructed especially for the sport will aid greatly in keeping the players in motion all the time and will also insure that the crowd will be protected. This cage arrangement is an expensive affair and is something new in Fort Wayne, and is in itself worth seeing.

Coach George Sunday has his men all primed for the first game and will work with Benz on the attack, Sauertieg or Rocher will play at center and Scott and Dietrick will be in the trenches to keep the enemy out of counting territory.

The opposing club will have Deery and Lill at forward, McArdle at center and Moran and Klein guards. The men had a nice little workout yesterday afternoon and were permitted to use the floor at the hall and they put up a pretty stiff practice.

MEETING IS STILL TO COME.

That interstate meeting scheduled half a dozen times has not taken place because nobody seems to care whether the circuit is ever organized or not. It was to have been held yesterday.

COLDS DO NOT CAUSE CATARRH

BAD BLOOD DOES

A cold will usually aggravate the symptoms of Catarrh, just as it may increase the pains of Rheumatism. But the cold has no more to do with the real cause of the one than with the other. Bad blood is the underlying cause for Catarrh; the circulation is infected with impurities which are deposited into the mucous membranes causing inflammation and irritation, followed by excessive secretion of the nose and throat, roaring sounds in the ears, neuralgia, inflamed eyes, etc. Being a deep-seated blood trouble, Catarrh must be treated constitutionally, for it is beyond the reach of local treatment. The blood must be purified—the cause removed before a cure can be effected. S. S. S. cures Catarrh by cleansing the blood of all impure catarrhal matter and at the same time building up the system by its fine tonic effects. In other words S. S. S. cures the trouble by supplying the mucous membranes with healthy, life-giving blood instead of saturating them with catarrhal impurities. Special book on Catarrh and any medical advice free to all who write and request same. S. S. S. is for sale at drug stores.

MANY ATTENDED SERVICES TODAY

New Year's Day Observed Appropriately in Catholic Churches.

IN OTHER CHURCHES

Today the Feast of the Circumcision, or New Year's day, was observed with special solemnity in all of the Catholic churches and the services this morning were attended by large congregations. Preparatory for the festal day special devotions were held in some of the churches on Tuesday evening. At St. Peter's church these devotions consisted of the singing of the Veni Creator, two short sermons, one in English and the other in German, chanting of the Miserere followed by benediction and the singing of the Te Deum. Similar services were held for the congregation of St. Hyacinth's Polish church. At St. Vincent's orphan asylum chapel there was held an hour's adoration of the blessed sacrament from 11 to 12 o'clock and at the midnight hour benediction was given by the chaplain, Rev. William C. Miller, secretary to Bishop Alerding.

In all of the German Lutheran churches of the city services were held last evening and also this forenoon and were largely attended. Watch meetings were held last night in several of the other Protestant churches and in a few of them services were held this forenoon.

The school society of the St. Andrew's Catholic parish held a very enjoyable progressive pedro party last evening at the school hall and it was largely attended. The proceeds are for the benefit of the church, as were also those realized by the oyster supper given.

PARCELS POST COMES INTO USE

Reports Made to Washington Indicate Big Demand on New System.

IS EXPECTED TO GROW

Washington, Jan. 1.—Americans today were using for the first time their newest institution the parcels post.

Reports to headquarters from postoffices, large and small, throughout the country indicated that the newest of government services was being ushered into its usefulness with a heavy day and that the facilities provided for handling the new business would be taxed to capacity as the public knowledge of it became more general.

From all points came reports of "freak" shipments in the new post. They consisted of everything from pitchforks and prunes to paving blocks and poultry. Under the regulations, practically every class of merchandise is mailable by parcels post. All mail matter formerly fourth class now goes in the new service.

NOT A FAIR INDEX.

New York, Jan. 1.—The first ten hours of the parcel service here gave no fair index of the extent to which the service will be used. Because this was a holiday the mails closed at 10 a. m. Many packages bearing the new stamps had been received at the local stations between that hour and midnight, when the service began.

The ten new automobiles, twenty-five delivery wagons and three motor tricycles which Postmaster Morgan has ordered to deliver this mail matter were more than enough to take care of the day's business. Mr. Morgan said that, in common with the other postmasters of the country, he would make a report on this subject to the department at Washington at the end of fifteen days.

ROWDIES INVADE A CHURCH.

Drunken Men Cause Panic During Worship at Newport, Ky.

Cincinnati, Jan. 1.—A trio of drunken rowdies, armed with revolvers, invaded Corpus Christi church at Newport, Ky., across the river from Cincinnati, early today, and by shouting and brandishing their weapons caused a small panic among several hundred worshipers who had assembled for early mass. The congregation started to stampede, but were halted by the reassuring voice of Father Von Mehr, the pastor. The men in the congregation surrounded the ruffians and after a hard fight disarmed them.

BURLEIGH WILL BE CHOSEN.

Progressives to Act With Republicans in Maine.

Augusta, Maine, Jan. 1.—Edwin C. Burleigh, of Augusta, republican, will be elected United States senator on January 14 by the Maine legislature, which opened its 74th session today, according to the party leaders. The progressives who claim to hold the balance of power announced they would act with the regular republicans. Governor-elect William T. Haines republican, will be inaugurated tomorrow.

WARSHIPS IN WAITING.

Ready to Convoy British Cruiser Bearing Reid's Remains.

New Yor, Jan. 1.—Two battleships and four torpedo boat destroyers lay off Tompkinsville, Staten island, today, with steam up, waiting for word that the British cruiser Natal, bearing the body of Whitelaw Reid was in wireless touch the Atlantic coast. The American squadron consists of the battleships Florida and North Dakota and the destroyers Roe, Drayton, McCall and Paulding. Rear Admiral B. A. Fiske, the commander, will meet the Natal off Nantucket, 250 miles from this port, and convoy her to anchorage in the North river.

The funeral of the late ambassador will take place at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine Saturday morning.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Muir, of Fairfield avenue, a daughter.

New York's monument in Central park to the victims of the Maine disaster is nearing completion.

THE DEATHS.

MORAN.

Mrs. Rachael A. Moran, one of Fort Wayne's oldest residents, died at 1:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon after an attack of heart disease. She was aged ninety-four years, ten months and seven days. She was the oldest living member of the Cathedral congegation, and had long been actively identified with the affairs of the church, as a member of the different societies.

Until a few days ago she was in comparatively good health for one of her advanced years, although she had been ill for about one year. She was widely known as a women of excellent and charitable disposition and numbered her friends by the hundred.

Mrs. Moran was born February 24, 1818, in Fredericks, Md., and was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Nuesbaum. She came to Indiana in 1848 and this city had been her home continuously since that year. Her husband, Peter Moran, died several years ago. Surviving she leaves one daughter, Mrs. Margaret C. Ditlow of 611 East Wayne street.

Peter Moran, husband of the deceased, was the originator of the Moran Ice company in Fort Wayne. At this date three generations have been represented in the business, Peter Moran, his son, Peter A. Moran, and then Peter J. Moran and B. A. Moran, the latter two grandchildren of the deceased. The family has resided in the First ward for more than sixty-four years, and Peter Moran, sr., husband of the deceased, was the first man to hold a government contract for the hauling of mail to and from the Fort Wayne postoffice.

REED.

Miss Ellen Elizabeth Reed, aged forty years, died at 5:10 o'clock Tuesday evening at the home of her brother, William J. Reed four miles east of the city on the Maysville road. Death was due to a complication of diseases and followed a prolonged illness.

The deceased was born in Allen county and had lived here all her life. She received her education in St. Augustine's academy, and was a life long member of the Cathedral. She was also a member of the Young Ladies' Sodality and of the Sacred Heart league. Surviving she leaves the aged mother, Mrs. Mary Reed, two brothers and two sisters—John J. Reed, of Fort Wayne; William J. Reed, with whom she hade her home; Mrs. John Greve, of Minneapolis, and Miss Delia Reed, at home.

SCHOOL DANCES CONDEMNED.

Minister Terms Waltzes Originators of Crime Among Youths.

Cleveland, O., Jan. 1.—The Rev. W. W. Rustard, declaring that high school dances were as much responsible for the marked increase in crime in America as any other one thing, sharply criticised the proposal of Mrs. Virginia Green, school board member, to use public school buildings for dance halls.

"Down at Columbus a young girl sot a man who first met her at a dance and then betrayed her, yet a certain member of the school board says that I don't know anything about dancing," said Rustard.

EUROPEAN STUDY SOUGHT.

Farmers Wish Knowledge of Foreign Rural Credit System.

Spokane, Wash., Jan. 1.—Farmers of Washington and Idaho are uniting, through the Farmers' Educational and Co-operative union and the grange, to have the legislatures appropriate money to send men to Europe to study rural credit systems.

"We know that in France and Germany farmers, through co-operation, can borrow money for 3 or 4 per cent interest," says L. C. Crow, president of the union. "In America we average 8 per cent, yet our security is as good as theirs."

The Chains of Friendship Strengthen, As Year by Year It Lengthens

We know this has been true in each case. Eighteen years ago this store sold its first clothing in Fort Wayne. Each year since we have sold more goods than we did the year before. A steady increase for eighteen years. Last year's business was five times that of 1895. Last year was our best year; last month was our best month in the history of our store, so in wishing you all the good things for 1913, we want to thank you and assure you that we appreciate what you have done for us.

NOT HIGH PRICED—
BUT HIGH VALUE FOR THE PRICE

will be our motto again this year.

HOPE TO REACH NINE ENTOMBED

Miners Caught by Rush of Waters Helping in Own Rescue.

NO SERIOUS DANGER

Tamaqua, Pa., Jan. 1.—The nine men entombed in the east Lehigh Coal company colliery yesterday by a rush of water from an abandoned mine working, were still imprisoned today, but the company officials hope to reach them alive before night.

The imprisoned men are helping in the work of rescue. Immediately after they had been walled in they set to work digging themselves out. Through a system of rapping understood by miners, they have made it known that they are well. They have good ventilation, through a fortunate pinch in the coal vein, and company officials say there is no serious danger of a further rush of debris.

Spurred on by the rapping of the entombed workers, the rescuers worked all night, in short relays digging through the big barriers that holds the men. The water which rushed into the mine has all been pumped out.

PREPARING FOR SHARP CONTEST

Department of Justice is to War on Disputed Repeal

BY JUDICIAL CODE

Washington, Jan. 1.—Officials of the department of justice are preparing for a serious contest over the disputed repeal by the judicial code a year ago today of the so-called "criminal appeals acts."

The latter act gave to the government the right to carry to the supreme court of the United States criminal cases decided on some point of law contrary to the government's contention.

The immediate effect of such a repeal would be the defeat of the government in its anti-trust prosecution of the Pacific and Arctic Railroad and Navigation company and other transportation interests for alleged attempt to monopolize transportation in Alaska. It might end the prosecution of officials of the United Shoe Machinery company, under the present indictments for alleged combination of the shoe machinery business in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law. In both cases the government has appealed from adverse decisions on points of law, by virtue of the criminal appeals act during the last year.

The criminal appeals act was passed in 1907. The judicial code which "codified, revised and amended the laws relating to the judiciary," does not contain the language of the criminal appeals act, but repeats in terms the earlier statutes which the supreme court held a few years ago did not give the United States the right of review in any criminal case. The argument is now made that the omission of the criminal appeals act from the code worked its repeal. The government is preparing to take the position that the code specifically repealed all laws intended to be repealed and the failure to include the criminal appeals act in this list demonstrates that it was not repealed. The point may be touched upon in the argument of the shoe machinery case, set before the supreme court for January 6. In any event it will be practically the only question argued in the Alaskan navigation case set for argument on February 24. A decision that the appeals act was repealed would lead probably to agitation in congress to have the law reenacted.

URGE A FARM BUREAU.

Secretary Charles L. Biederwolf has received a communication from the council of grain exchanges of Chicago, which asks that the Commercial club of Fort Wayne consider the establishment of a farm bureau here for the benefit of farmers in this part of Indiana. Sears, Robuck & Co. has offered $1,000 toward the general fund for establishing the bureaus in all parts of the country. The movement is hoped to further agricultural endeavor, producing better and larger crops by supplying valuable farm information.

MAILED IN FIRST SECOND OF 1913

Mr. Hitchcock is Initial Patron of the New Parcels Post.

SENT A LOVING CUP

Washington, Jan. 1.—As the clocks ticked off the first second of 1913, Postmaster General Hitchcock inaugurated a new era in the American postal service by depositing in the Washington postoffice the first package to be entrusted to the domestic parcels post service.

Postmaster General Hitchcock's package contained a silver loving cup enclosed in a stout box. The package was addressed to E. M. Morgan postmaster of the City of New York and after it has made its journey to New York it will be sent back to Washington, to be engraved and preserved in the National museum to commemorate the inauguration of the parcels post service. The postmaster general paid for 27 cents worth of stamps affixed to the package, which weighed about two pounds. Of this sixteen cents was for regular postage and 10 cents for "insurance" or registration.

President-Elect Gets First Parcels Post Package in New Jersey.

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 1.—The first parcel post package delivered in New Jersey, and, so far as is known, in the United States, was left at the home of President-elect Wilson at 12:04 o'clock this morning. The Woodrow Wilson club of Princeton deposited in the local postoffice at 12:01 o'clock a package of apples weighing exactly eleven pounds, the maximum amount that can be sent. By pre-arrangement, David Gransom, the letter carrier who delivers Governor Wilson's mail was awaiting for it. Before the cancelling ink was dry on the stamps Gransom was driving furiously down the muddy street for the president-elect's home. Governor Wilson keeping the New Year's vigil with his family met him at the door; signed for the package and presented him with the pencil. A few seconds later the Wilson family was munching apples.

WOMAN DENTIST FOR THE INSANE

Slip of a Girl is Resident "D. D. S." at an Asylum

AND "IT IS SUCH FUN"

New York, Jan. 1.—When Emma Westfehling left the College of Dental and Oral Surgery of New York with her degree of D. D. S., an easy path to success had been prepared for her by her father, Dr. H. Westfehling of 391 East One Hundred and Forty-ninth street. Her name had been engraved on the door of a private office ready furnished as a pleasant surprise and a reward for her brilliant graduation. But Dr. Emma scorned any such ordinary practice. Instead she chose the most trying and dangerous that of resident dentist at the insane asylum at Central Islip, L. I.

The salary is good and bachelor quarters and attendance are furnished free by the state; still the position had "gone begging" for three years. Many a young dentist who had watched his shingle swing unnoticed month after month had tried the work, but one day was usually quite sufficient to send him back to starvation and hope, glad to escape from insane patients.

When Dr. Emma Westfehling, twenty years old, applied for the job the board of trustees scoffed, but as she was armed with her degree and had passed the necessary civil service examination they were obliged to give her a trial. So she was taken through the asylum and shown the 5,500 men and women who were to be her patients, every one of whom had been adjudged dangerously insane. But it didn't faase her a bit.

To every one's astonishment she passed a successful year at the asylum, and returned home healthy and rosy for an eight weeks' vacation. Her father erased her name from the door of the office he had provided for her, giving up hope of her abandoning her work. She is back at the asylum on her second year's work, and is now permanently on the staff of the Central Islip asylum.

When a reporter called there to see her he was shown into a spotlessly white office, furnished after the usual manner of dentists' workshops. Dr. Westfehling was dressed in a spotless white uniform, her hair loosely coiled about her head, high school girl fashion. She is such a slim little girl that the glare of a madman ought to annihilate her.

"I love it. It is such fun. There is no monotony. Everything is intensely exciting. And this is the most exciting place in the whole asylum. It is so exhilirating to know that I can do work successfully that experienced men have fallen down on.

"Your mind is kept constantly on the alert. Each patient has to be taken differently. I think that is why I have so little trouble with them. The men are a great deal easier to manage than the women, who are apt to be very abusive at times. Some patients will not say a word, but will sit glumly still in the chair; and they are very difficult to manage. Others are so garrulous that it is necessary to put a gag in their mouths to get anything done. I am kept very busy, for I have an average of fifteen patients a day. My hours are from 9 to 12 and 2 to 4. The rest of the time is my own, and I can take private patients. Of course they all belong to the asylum—doctors and nurses and so on; every one in Central Islip belongs, directly or indirectly, to the asylum.

"I'll take you around the wards in a minute and show you my patients, and then you will not be surprised that life is not just one sweet song in this office. You know the patients are always very much fascinated with bright objects; these seem to excite their poor brains. Now, naturally, I must have dozens of my bright instruments lying around, and if the attendant is not watching, in a flash the instrument disappears. I keep them counted all the time, for the possession of one of these sharp tools would create some racket in the wards.

"One patient, who seemed very docile, was having a couple of teeth extracted, for her mouth was in very bad shape. All went well and the operation was completed, when, as she walked toward the door, she seized a pair of forceps and darted toward the attendant. I gave the alarm at once, but it took eight men to hold her. Insane people develop uncanny strength when they are seized with a paroxysm of this kind. Luckily they are not antagonistic to me.

"Epileptic people, however, are the most dangerous to treat. They are so uncertain, and you can never tell when they are going to have a seizure.

"We have one woman who is suffering from a very malignant form of chorea, and for the last year she has not kept still for one-half minute; her legs and arms thrash about incessantly. Last year when she came here she weighed nearly 200 pounds; now she is almost a skeleton. All she can say is 'Pitcher of milk, pitcher of milk,' which she keeps on repeating.

"I have to treat all the patients, for the mouths of the majority of them are in a terrible state; bad teeth are worse than anything else for poisoning the system. So, no matter how violent they are, all the inmates must have their teeth attended to. Now come and see my patients."

Through many wards Dr. Westfehling guided the visitor; ward after ward of idiots, harmless looking creatures. Most of them recognized Dr. Westfehling as she passed through and approached her to scratch her back or pat her soft dress. To many she spoke, asking them what they were doing. Women of thirty or fifty answered with less intelligence than a child of six.

Women of great education are among the inmates; several of them speak fluently more than three languages, and one formerly was governess of the daughter of a president.

"Even in the violent wards, where shrieking and fighting and cursing continue day and night, the doctor chatted along about her patients and her interest in the work.

"Do you realize that we have walked through a mile and a half of wards? Now, do you want to walk back again? Or shall we return by the grounds?"

Out in the grounds Dr. Emma was asked how she amused herself.

"Oh, there's lots of time for fun. We nearly all have wheels, and the roads are bully. Then we have dances, and moving picture shows come out. Every month I get four days off and I go home. My hobby is embroidering, and I have had time to do a lot of it since I came here. I enjoy it every minute of the time."

Just then an attendant came running up.

"Oh, doctor, a patient in ward F has broken her jaw! Come right away!"

"All right," Dr. Emma called out. "Now, you will have to excuse me," and she hurried off to fix a possibly violent patient's broken jaw.

TOO BUSY TO VISIT CAR

Trainmen and Enginemen Fail to Attend Air Brake Schools.

NEW FOREMAN AT NICKEL PLATE SHOP

C. L. Cooper, of Stony Island, Succeeds Mr. James, Promoted.

Capt. H. M. Deihl, air brake instructor for the Pennsylvania company, whose car is now located at Allegheny, returned home last night to spend the holiday with his family. Captain Deihl says that freight traffic on the road is heavy and that the engineers, conductors, firemen and brakemen are so busy that very few of them can find time to visit the car to be instructed in air brake matters. Captain Deihl has been long in the service and has witnessed some very busy seasons, but this is the first time in his experience that the men could not find time to attend the air brake schools.

C. L. COOPER NEW FOREMAN.

Succeeds G. James, Who Goes to Conneaut.

The change of round house foreman on the Nickel Plate at this point, talked about for two or three weeks, became effective today, when C. L. Cooper assumed charge, relieving George James, who has held the position several years. The company has enlarged the round house and shops at Conneaut, Ohio, and it is understood that Mr. James will assume charge of them after he has taken a few weeks' rest. The change will be a good promotion for Mr. James. He has been with the Nickel Plate many years, commencing at Bellevue soon after the road opened for business and later going to Stony Island. He is regarded a most proficient motive power man and is well liked by officials and employes. Mr. Cooper has been employed as a machinist in the Stony Island shops for several years. He never worked in Fort Wayne, but is known to most of the engineers and firemen who run in and out of that terminal.

STOPS AT DETROIT.

Wabash Train No. 28 Will Not Run to Buffalo.

Until spring eastbound Wabash passenger train No. 28 will not run farther east than Detroit. It has been running between St. Louis and Buffalo, but during the winter months does a light business east of Detroit. Hence the change.

WILL TRANSFER TRACK LAYERS.

The force of track layers employed in relaying the Pennsylvania tracks through western Ohio will be transferred from Elida to Delphos this week. There are about 100 men in the force and they are under Foreman Ed Kerchner. The Delphos Herald says "that part of the force arrived in that city Monday and put down tracks upon which the bunk cars will be located and then returned to Elida to finish the work there, expecting to move the entire force to Delphos soon."

NEW TRAIN CONTROL DEVICE.

A newly invented automatic train control device is being tried out thoroughly by the Pennsylvania officials at Pittsburg. By means of this device a train that has run past a signal will be stopped within a short distance and the claims of the inventor were substantiated by actual tests last week. It will prevent rear-end collision and head-on collisions, as well as an accident by an improperly set switch.

GAVE MR. QUINN A CHAIR.

James Quinn, who retired to the pension list of the Pennsylvania yesterday after a service in the blacksmith department of over a half century, was presented with an easy chair by the foremen and employes of the department. Mr. Quinn's shop career was published by The Sentinel on Christmas, the seventieth anniversary of his birth.

INDUSTRIAL NOTES.

Division Storekeeper C. P. Cherry, of the Pennsylvania, arrived home this morning. He had been at Pittsburg on business for the company.

Fred Gruch, janitor at the Pennsylvania office building, on Clinton street, and his wife are the guests of his brother in Chicago. George A. Climer is acting janitor during the absence of Mr. Gruch.

Andrew Yates, boilermaker in a railway shop at Peoria, Ill., is here to spend the week with relatives and friends. He was employed in the Pennsylvania shops several years ago and called there yesterday to see his former shopmates.

Oscar Swinney is now assistant to Baggage Master George W. Ellenwood at the Lake Shore depot. He succeeds Roy Reese, who has gone to Yardmaster C. D. Rose's office as clerk. Mr. Swinney was formerly in the freight department.

Chief Clerk Frank H. Starkel, of the Lake Shore and Lake Erie and Western roads, is on duty again after an absence since last Thanksgiving day on account of injuries sustained in a fall while putting away some window screens for the winter. He is still quite lame.

Charles W. Koenig, who is a member of the board of directors of the Wabash Hospital association, has returned from an inspection of the three hospitals, located at Peru, Decatur and Moberly. One week from tomorrow the board will announce the name of a surgeon to succeed Chief Surgeon Moorehead, who died a few weeks ago.

Ethan A. Clark, Pennsylvania patrol man, who recently purchased and remodelled the O'Rourke property at the corner of Williams and Clinton streets, will move his family therein tomorrow. In fact, the work of moving has been in progress by piecemeal for several days and will be completed tomorrow.

LONDON TAXI DRIVERS STRIKE.

Tie-Up of Buzz Buggies in English Capital Almost Complete.

London, Jan. 1.—An almost complete tie-up of taxicabs in London was effected today when the drivers carried out the strike they voted last night. It was estimated that 8,000 taxicabs sat idle in their garages during the day, the only taxis running being the few owned by individual drivers. All of the taxicab companies, from the largest to the smallest, were affected, although they declared they had the names of many strike-breakers who would relieve the situation soon. The trouble is largely owing to the inability of the companies, as they claim, to make the taxicab business profitable. When the first vehicles first appeared the larger companies reaped a great harvest of profits, but lately few of the companies have been able to pay dividends. On the other hand the drivers claim that they are unable to make a living under the agreement that they furnish their own petrol. An advance in the price of petrol from 8 to 13 pence to the drivers they declared they would not pay.

As C. A. Dunkelberg was on his way home early this morning he found a slot machine of the baseball variety at DeWald street and Fairfield avenue, and took it to police headquarters. It had been stolen from in front of George Roach's pool room, where it was crated ready for shipment. The crate had been torn off but the machine was not broken.

FORT WAYNE, INDIANA.

THESE MEN HAVE BEEN SELECTED BY THE NEW SHERIFF AS HIS AIDES AND ALL ENTERED UPON THEIR DUTIES WITH THE NEW YEAR.

At the top—Daniel Falvey, bailiff in county commissioners' court; Herman Witte, circuit court deputy; Henry E. Branning, jr., chief deputy; William B. Sible, deputy in jail yard; Herman Pranger, superior court deputy.

Bottom row—Ed R. Courdevey, riding deputy; A. C. Gladieux, sheriff; Michael Parnin, turnkey at county jail.

The most sweeping change at the court house today was made in the sheriff's office when A. C. Gladieux began his term of office with an entirely new staff of deputies, succeeding Aaron M. Reichelderfer, who turned over his prisoners and all the other appurtenances of his office early today.

Of the men who went into office with Mr. Gladieux only Ed Courdevey has had any experience in the duties which fall upon the new party. He was for several years a riding deputy under Mr. Reichelderfer and proved himself a capable and hard-working officer. Henry Branning has been office deputy for his father, who is trustee of Wayne township, and while the young man has had no actual experience in the particular line he has taken up he has a thorough knowledge of office detail and is well equipped to take his new position.

Mr. Gladieux has given the office and its duties some careful study and has been intelligent and painstaking in all of his undertakings and there is little doubt that he will be able to handle successfully the work that will fall to his lot as a public servant. The other men have their spurs to earn.

They have been picked with special reference to the class of work they will take up and all of them are believed fully capable of rapidly learning all of the things that they will have to learn in the course of their new positions.

There was a big reception in the sheriff's office during the forenoon in the course of which Mr. Gladieux and his force played host to the army of friends who called to offer their congratulations and good wishes for the success of the incoming officials.

We won't be too ambitious in the resoluting way,
We'll plan on very little of the new leaf stuff,
For neither Rome nor Athens was completed in a day
And reforming's not accomplished by a great big bluff.
We're going to take it gently and by stages and degrees;
Our goodness will not raise us to a higher sphere.
But we'll try to show improvement in our actions, if you please,
And be a little better than we were last year

We shan't upset the country by our thoughtfulness and care,
We'll go on being selfish to a large extent,
But maybe there'll be troubles we can kind of help to share,
And maybe we'll be kinder in our temperament;
We shall not have a halo for the charity we do
(A mural with a halo would be mighty queer)
But we'll moderate our tempers—(can we count a bit on you?)
And we'll be a little kinder than we were last year

We won't be too ambitious in the matter of reform,
But we'll be a little better if we find we can.
And where the market's crowded and the game is getting worn
We'll be a little nicer to our fellow man;
We shan't be shining angels and we wouldn't if we could,
We only hope for progress and we start right here,
We want to be—not perfect, or even goody-good"—
But Better Human Beings than we were last year

"All is Well That Ends Well"

Along with dyspepsia comes nervousness, sleeplessness and general ill health. Why? Because a disordered stomach does not permit the food to be assimilated and carried to the blood. On the other hand, the blood is charged with poisons which come from this disordered digestion. In turn, the nerves are not fed on good, red blood and we see those symptoms of nervous breakdown. It is not head work that does it, but poor stomach work. With poor thin blood the body is not protected against the attack of germs of grip—bronchitis—consumption. Fortify the body now with

CISSELL STARTS DOCKET OF 1913

First Prisoner of Year Before City Court Draws Eleven Days.

CITY COURT CASES

Oscar Cissell, wearing a countenance that indicated the results of his attempt to carry a jag that made him top-heavy, was the first city court prisoner of the year. He got $1 and costs, which means eleven days in the county jail as there is no possibility that he and his whole list of friends can dig up $11 and as little possibility that they would spend it paying a fine if they could get hold of it.

Cissell might have escaped and been presented with the first indefinite continuance of the year if he had not been in a few days ago on the same charge. His injuries resulted from falls he sustained trying to make port with his cargo of liquor.

Joseph Burns carried the same handicap into court that Cissell carried. He had been in for drunkenness only a few days before and when he showed up this morning he was fined $1 and costs and will test out Sheriff Gladieux's first bill of fare.

John Slater lives in Peru, and promised to go back there at once and he was let go.

Clarence Brase is charged by Louis Crawley with riding his motorcycle faster than the speed laws allow, and he will be tried tomorrow morning. He failed to show up today.

Talbott Clark, charged with defrauding a board bill was given an opportunity to pay up.

William McCarty, a vag, was the first man to be arrested this year. He was sent in by Patrolman Majors, and held over until Saturday.

JUSTICE SILENCES WOMAN.

Wife Starts to Denounce Mother-in-Law in Court.

New York, Dec. 1.—A sealed verdict will be reported to Supreme Court Justice Giegerich in the Zimmerman-Konselman suit for $50,000 damages. Mrs. Adam Zimmerman charged Mrs. Clare B. Konselman with having alienated the affections of Adam Zimmerman.

During the closing hours of the trial Mrs. Cornelia Zimmerman Konselman, who married a son of Mrs. Clare B. Konselman, started to denounce her mother-in-law from the witness stand. She was silenced by Justice Giegerich. The daughter-in-law branded her husband's testimony on a certain question as an atrocious falsehood."

NOTES OF THE COURTS.

County Clerk Gerding and his force issued marriage licenses to the number of 1,014 last year as against 919 for 1911.

Hunters' licenses issued during the year totaled 2,042 and twenty-three fishermen took out permits.

Jennie Trentman obtained a restraining order in the circuit court to prevent J. C. Peters from putting a fire escape on the Wayne hotel that she says will damage a building next door that she owns.

County Assessor William Eggeman's report for the year shows that he listed $527,660 of omitted and transient property during last year. The collections amounted to $11,752.55.

For one ambassador, Viscount Jinda, Japan, it was his first appearance at a New Year's reception at the white house, while a number of ministers had never attended one before, including the Dominion republic, Sweden, Siam, Honduras, Denmark and Panama.

A Brilliant Spectacle.

The army and navy contingent made a brilliant spectacle. Every officer of the two services, as well as of the marine branch, now in Washington, was under orders to report at the war and navy departments. The former gathered in the offices of Major General Wood, chief of staff, and headed by that officer, and Lieut. Gen. Miles, retired, in double file moved slowly through the corridors and down the granite stair case on the eastern approach and across Executive avenue to the white house.

Many officers of high rank held places in the line, including Maj. Gen. Witherspoon, Maj. Gen. Aleshire, Brig. Gen. Andrews, adjutant general of the army; Brig. Gen. Weaver, chief of the coast artillery; Brig. Gen. Crozier, president of the war college; Brig. Gen. Mills, chief of the military division; Brig. Gen. Bixby, chief of engineers; Brig. Gen. Torney, surgeon general; Brig. Gen. Sharpe, Brig. Gen. Smith, Brig. Gen. Allen, chief signal officer; Brig. Gen. Crowder, Brig. Gen. Carlington, Brig. Gen. McIntyre and the whole of the staff of Gen. Wood. Besides General Miles there were some other distinguished retired officers, such as Lieut. Gen. Bates, Gen. S. B. M. Young, Brig. Gen. John C. Wilson and many others.

Navy Next in Order.

While the army officers were being presented, the officers of the navy were preparing to fall in at Secretary Meyer's offices, under the leadership of Rear Admiral Vreeland and Rear Admiral Badger, the new commander in chief of the Atlantic fleet. Rear Admiral Andrews, chief of the bureau of navigation; Rear Admiral Twinning, chief of the bureau of ordinance; Rear Admiral Watt, chief constructor; Rear Admiral Hutcheone, engineer in chief; Rear Admiral Stanford, of the bureau of yards and docks; Rear Admiral Willetts, director of navy yards, and Rear Admiral Mitchel Stokes, surgeon general of the navy, formed the head of the line and interminglied with them were many officers and retired officers of high rank, resident in Washington, such as Rear Admiral Wainwright, Rear Admiral Barker and Rear Admiral Peary.

Knoxs Give Breakfast.

Secretary of State and Mrs. Knox prepared to receive the diplomats immediately after they left the white house at a breakfast in their honor, given in the Pan-American union building. To meet them there were invited also the members of the senate, foreign relations and house foreign affairs committees.

Not only at the white house and the Pan-American building, but through all official Washington receptions were the order of the day. Cabinet officers and their wives prepared to dispense their hospitality to all who might come and automobiles, bearing army and navy officers from the home of one superior to another, to whom they wished to pay their respects. Secretary and Mrs. Knox alone received none but the members of the diplomatic corps, all other cabinet officers keeping open house.

souri and into Kansas was to have been kept secret but at every station crowds greeted the train as the "dynamiters special" and cheers and singing at midnight showed the disposition of the prisoners toward a new year which to them was to begin with imprisonment.

At night while passing Jefferson City, Mo., Marshal Schmidt passed around coffee which was drunk from tin cups. Each member was permitted at that time to write out New Year's messages to members of his family.

Sat Facing Armed Guards.

Beyond that outburst of cheers it was a long monotonous ride for the men each of whom was required to sit throughout the night facing an armed guard.

F. J. Higgins, former New England organizer for the Iron Workers' union became unconscious on the train and was placed in a physician's care. He is sentenced to serve two years.

When the prisoners were registered it was found that Ryan, aged 58 years, was the oldest and Fred Sherman, aged 28, is the youngest. Charles Wachtmeister with eight children has the largest family. He is sentenced to two years.

Tveitmoe Wants Books.

Almost the first question asked by Tveitmoe on entering the prison was about the library. Among the treasures which he asked to be allowed to retain was a book of Latin verse inscribed Anton Johannsen, another San Francisco labor leader, who has been indicted in Los Angeles.

Asked whether he intended to relinquish any of his affiliations on the Pacific coast he replied, "Absolutely none."

Near Kansas City the prison train passed within sight of the railroad bridge across the Missouri river which Ortie McManigal confessed he blew up. It had not long been daylight when the train pulled into the penitentiary yard. The prisoners' last view of the outside was a placid expense of the Missouri river.

From the train within the prison gates the prisoners were called forth alphabetically and stood two abreast.

Names No More; Numbers Now.

"Reddin and Ryan," read the United States marshal, "Cooley and Clancy," or "Beum and Butler." It was the last time the men were to be called by name. Hereafter they will be called by number.

In the office of Deputy Warden W. H. Mackey, the prisoners were relieved of their pocket possessions. Among these were photographs of wives, mothers and children.

Ryan faced the deputy warden with his shoulders thrown back and head held erect. It required about three minutes to search the prisoner. He then was taken to another room to have his prison clothes fitted.

A photograph of three girls fell from the pocket of Charles Beum, a former member of the iron workers executive board. He could scarcely repeat his name.

Gazing with a wistful look as the photograph was folded in a large yellow envelope, he raised his hands to his face and cried bitterly.

As "Herbert S. Hockin" was announced in stepped the man who during the trial was called "The Iago of the conspiracy."

the year totaled nearly sixty millions of dollars.

Building has also progressed. During the last twelve months Fort Wayne's building activity made rapid strides. New buildings of every description were erected, and it was with difficulty that contractors kept apace with the demands for their services. Public, private and special purpose buildings have been erected, some are now under course of completion and others are awaiting the arrival of spring to be started.

Through the efforts of numerous organizations Fort Wayne has been made more beautiful. The Civic Improvement association and its associate organizations has done much toward helping the city step ahead and as a result of the combined efforts of every faction of city life, Fort Wayne has been made more beautiful to live in.

Officials of the city and county, members of the clergy, business men, manufacturers and everybody with a voice in the affairs of Fort Wayne look forward to more advance during the coming twelve months.

TOLD NEWSPAPERS BY TOUCH.

Blind News Agent Worked Wonders With Finger Tips.

London, Jan. 1.—William Greenwood, a blind newsagent who was able to distinguish one newspaper from another by touch, has just died at Burnley.

Sixty-three years of age, he had been sightless from infancy. He was able to make his way along the streets unaided by snapping his fingers as a warning of his approach. Playing the piano or concertina was his recreation.

MR. STORK LOSES HIS JOB TO THE PARCELS POST-MAN.

UNCLE SAM IS WEARING SMILE

Closes Accounts for 1912 With Plenty of Cash in His Pockets.

WHAT FIGURES SHOW

Washington, Jan. 1.—Uncle Sam closed his accounts for the year 1912 with plenty of money in his pockets and a balance sheet of receipts and expenditures that bespoke the prosperity of the nation.

For the first half of the current fiscal year ending yesterday disbursements exceeded receipts by between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000, according to estimates of treasury officials, the exact figures for Dec. 31 not being available. The deficit a year ago, on the other hand, was over $31,497,000.

This improvement over last year is due to the remarkable increase in customs and internal revenue receipts during the past six months. Receipts from all sources from July to December were approximately $353,000,000, or more than $23,000,000 greater than during the corresponding period of 1911.

The aggregate expenditures for the six months ending today were about $295,000,000. This was nearly $5,000,000 greater than for the same period last year, the increases being due mainly to large expenditures for the army and the increased pension payments as a result of the pension legislation of the last congress.

The general fund of the government contains upwards of $140,000,000, while a year ago it held only $126,926,000. The working balance of the treasury, which is the actual cash in Uncle Sam's pocketbook today, amounted to about $88,000,000. The year 1911 closed with a working balance of $71,475,000.

The treasury holds about $1,253,665,000 in gold. This includes $150,000,000 in the reserve fund, the greater part of the remainder being represented by gold certificates in circulation.

TALKS HENS INTO LAYING.

Birds Hurry to Nests as Woman Threatens Death.

Winstead, Conn., Jan. 1.—Mrs. Hezekiah Allen of Reynolds Bridge advises poultry owners to be kind and talk to their hens if they want the birds to lay.

Mrs. Allen's hens had been taking a three weeks' vacation from egg laying. One morning recently, while they were partaking of a warm breakfast, she told them if they did not start laying she would cut their heads off.

One of the flock left its breakfast, went to its nest and laid, and since then several others have started laying.

WOMAN JUROR IS BASHFUL

Refuses to Let Husband Photograph Her in Box.

Eldorado, Kan., Jan. 1.—When Otis Boston, a photographer, attempted to take a picture of a jury composed entirely of women in the county court house, his wife, who was one of the jury, promptly left the box. She was followed by one of the other women, and the two protesting jurors refused to return until they were assured by the court that no picture would be taken. Mrs. Boston does not believe that women should serve as jurors, but her husband favors the innovation.

CHICKENS AS WITNESSES.

Response to Mistress' Call Holds Men for Grand Jury.

Wilmington, Del., Jan. 1.—When Martin McDonough and William Wood were arraigned in the city court on a charge of stealing chickens from Mrs. C. F. Brown of 1700 West Second street, they denied the offense, but Mrs. Brown declared the chickens were her property. To prove it she said they were pet fowls and that when she called to them in the police station they came running to her. This seemed to satisfy the court, for the two prisoners were held in $400 bail each for the grand jury.

EFFORTS TO REFORM FUTILE.

Illinois Woman Resigns Task After Years of Married Life.

Sterling, Ill., Jan. 1.—Mrs. Matilda Stobs has been granted a divorce from William Stobs. She testified she was was married to him forty-five years ago to reform him. She said she had labored honestly since then and had failed.

CRIPPLED; FACED PAIN WITH SMILE

After Sixteen Years Girl is to Get Damages for Injury.

TELLS OF HER LIFE

New York, Jan. 1. "I suffered as a child so that I used to shriek; I suffer now in my young womanhood so that I often cry aloud. Yet I have tried to be brave, tried to smile, tried to do my duty with courage in a world which has brought me agony where it brings other girls laughter."

That was the beginning of an interview given by Miss Harriet Nugent, 20, who was struck by a Metropolitan Railway company horse car sixteen years ago and so badly hurt that her left leg had to be amputated. In addition, the sight of her right eye was destroyed.

Benjamin Oppenheim, the lawyer who got a verdict from a jury in the supreme court for $5,000 for Miss Nugent and who as a result was disbarred nearly thirteen years ago on false evidence manufactured against him by the railway company, was vindicated last week. He will shortly be readmitted to the bar. It has been found that he did not get witnesses to swear falsely to the accident and Miss Nugent has been awarded the original $5,000, plus more than $6,000 interest.

Wooden Legs Expensive.

Miss Nugent was asked to tell something of her past life and of her plans when she gets her long-delayed money.

"Yes," she continued, "I have tried to carry out my obligations to my family and to myself as though I was a normal, healthy girl. Perhaps the very attempt to do that has aided me in bearing my suffering and trying to regard with the philosophy of the crippled the deprivation of being able to live normally.

"As a little girl I could not enter into the play of the children in the block. I had a crutch then. Now I have a wooden leg. It is my second, because, you see, I outgrew my first. And they're awfully expensive, too. This one cost $100."

Here she smiled—not the half smile of the unfortunate, but a sunny, reassuring smile, as though to put the interviewer at his ease. Her hair is a rich shade of light brown, flowing in wavy masses; her eye is grayish and it sparkles as she talks; her complexion is clear and pink. Nature planned Miss Nugent as an attractive girl.

The Pleasures She Found.

"So how did you amuse yourself?" asked the interviewer.

"Oh, I stayed in the house most of the time and played with my dolls and invented make-believe games for myself. Sometimes I went out, when I was not in much pain, and the other youngsters were good to me. But I never could romp and play hide-and-seek and do all the things that the other children did. And as I got bigger I felt I was too much of a drag and did not like to impose myself on the other children too much. As a more mature girl I have also been unable to join the frolics of those of my age, but I have had my own pleasures. Relief from pain is a pleasure in itself, you know."

There was silence in the little drawing room at 108 East Ninety-first street, where Miss Nugent has been trying for the last month to act as maid to Mrs. M. E. Murray.

"And then I've had my music," she went on. "I can play the piano and sing. My step-father wanted me to learn the violin, but just about then he got out of work and it wasn't possible to go on with that idea."

Now Supports Herself.

The step-father, George Galloway, is at present doorman at the police station of the One Hundred and Sixty-fifth precinct. He and Miss Nugent's sister, Catherine, twenty-two, have been supporting the crippled girl until she went to work for Mrs. Murray. Catherine works in a department store.

"And now you are working for yourself?"

"Yes, because I felt that I should not be a burden if it could be helped, and I thought I'd try to show that I can work as well as other people."

Mrs. Murraff stated that Miss Nugent is in such suffering at times that she seems about to faint, but that she rallies and goes grimly ahead.

"I guess I hold the hospital record of New York, continued Miss Nugent, with her smile in evidence. "I have been in eight hospitals, spending many terrible weeks there."

"How do you feel about Mr. Oppenheim's vindication?"

"Perfectly delighted, very thankful, and yet I feel very badly that the clearing of his name should have taken so long. It seems terrible that such things can happen. For him I have the deepest gratitude and the highest regard. It is to his fight for me that I owe this money which I am told I am to get."

INDIANA MAN IS LYNCHED.

Citizens of Missouri Town Reported Finding Him With Stolen Hog.

Hartford City, Ind., Dec. 1.—Word has reached here of the lynching, near Matthew, Mo., of Dick Starr, a former Montpelier resident. It is alleged that Starr stole a hog and took it to his home, where he strung it up in a tree, and that a posse of citizens, finding the missing porker on his premises, hanged Starr to the same limb from which the hog was suspended. A brother, Ben Starr, was shot to death a year ago by a neighbor, following a dispute about a ditch contract.

were accompanied by real cash, with which he can start a New Year's fund.

The new recorder spent most of the morning with his typewriter. This, of course, refers to the machine, and by noon he had ground out a very passable sort of a letter. He knows where two or three of the keys are located and used most commendable diligence in seeking out the others. The court house was kept open until noon, but no business was transacted.

The Retiring Officers.

John R. Wyss, who has served two terms as county commissioner and who was president for one term, will retire to his farm and his family in Marion township and if he adheres to his resolution he is done with public life.

He has a good farm, a big family and all of the things a man needs in this world and he says he will be content to enjoy them for the remainder of his days. Before he became a commissioner he was trustee of his township and he has been a public servant for a number of years.

Strict honesty in the administration of county affairs has been the governing principle in the life of Mr. Wyss and no man ever retired from office with greater honor and respect than he will carry into private life.

Some big undertakings have marked his connection with the board of commissioners and a vast amount of public money has been expended and John Wyss never gave his consent to a single item of expense until he was convinced that he was getting dollar for dollar for the county.

Reichelderfer Steps Out.

Aaron Reichelderfer and his entire staff of deputies stepped down during the day and gave way to his successor. B. Frank Eick, Barney Schoenfeldt, Fred Stolte, Harry Lowry and Joe Kirk are the court house men who quit with the sheriff.

In the course of his connection with the office Mr. Reichelderfer gave good service to his constituents and not only handled the civil business of his office in an intelligent and careful manner but he made a good record as a thief-taker.

One of his best achievements was the organization of an association for protection against horse thieves and this has not only brought about the capture of a number of men but has resulted always in the return of the stolen property.

With his good wife Mr. Reichelderfer will begin life as a private citizen after two terms as sheriff and both of them have filled the place assumed at the beginning of the term with such fidelity that the trust imposed with public office has been most faithfully kept and they hold the high esteem of the community.

Bob Kelly the Third One.

Bob Kelly, sometimes called Robert E., but most generally known as just plain Bob, gave way to Allen Hursh, who will do the recording for Allen county for the next four years.

Mr. Kelly looked things over last night before he closed his term and convinced himself that everything was in shipshape for his successor in office and then he turned over his keys and the things that went with them.

If Mr. Kelly was satisfied he felt that he had satisfied the public. He has treated his office just as he would his private affairs and all his energy for four years has been directed toward doing the work carefully and faithfully.

This he has done and when he gets into private life again the people who made him a public official will stand ready to congratulate him on the efficient manner in which he did his work.

WOMEN OF WEST AT THROTTLE.

Wives of Washington Engineers to Learn Locomotive Operation.

Everett, Wash., Jan. 1.—Perhaps the time will never come when any of the transcontinental railroad lines will employ women locomotive engineers, but the time is certainly coming when an association of Everett women will be sufficiently skilled to handle the throttle.

At the home of Mrs. Louis Noble, a number of women—all wives of the men who handle the Great Northern trains on the Cascade division, through flood and snow-slide, through good weather and bad—have perfected the organization of what they term the "Assistant Engineers' Club" and it is prescribed that the members are to study locomotive operation in all its branches.

"When our husbands come in from the runs," explains a member of this club, "all they appear to want to discuss is their engine. Now, we women know but little of locomotive running but we intend to learn all about it, if possible, and I fancy if a man can learn then we women can."

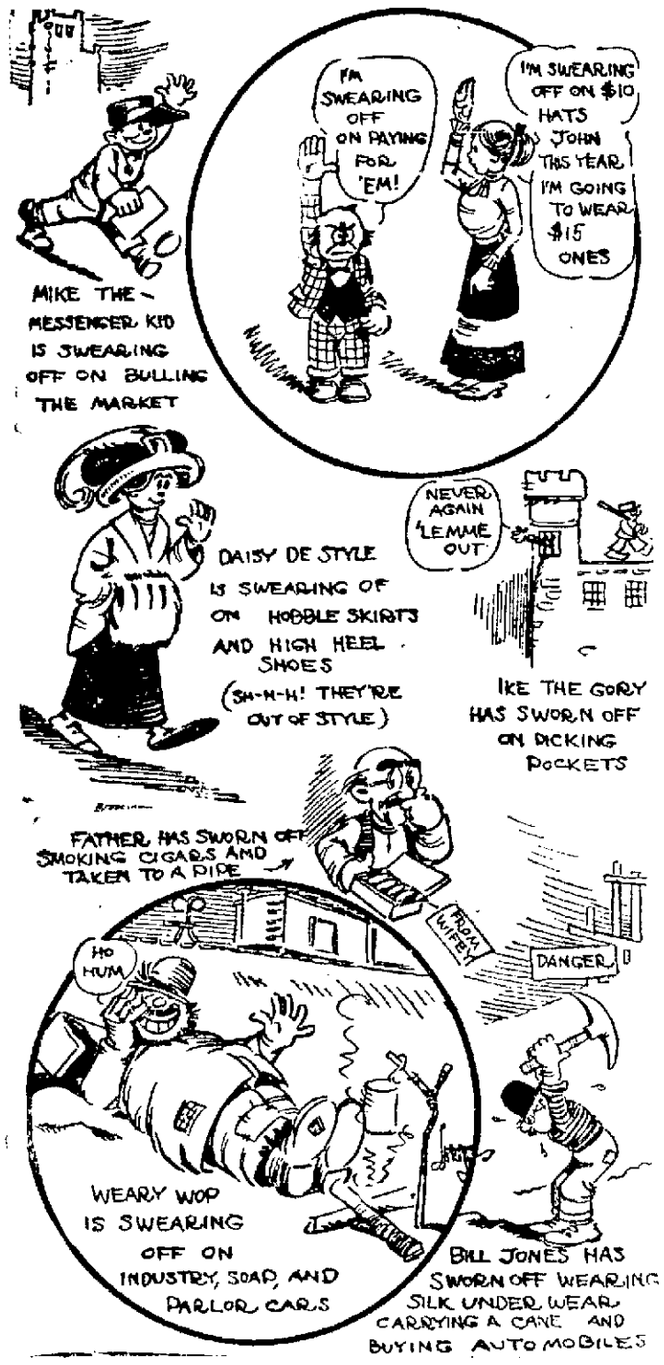

Here is a remedy that will cure your cold. Why waste time and money experimenting when you can get a preparation that has won a world-wide reputation by its cures of this disease and can always be depended upon? It is known everywhere as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and is a medicine of real merit. For sale by all dealers.—Adv.

sheriffs and assorted sizes of sleuths were put on Bill's trail. They have besieged his swell Fifth avenue mansion, and thrown guards around the homes of his sons-in-law, and marched a few companies to Bill's Tarrytown estate.

Bill's doctors have intimated that he was too sick to be bothered by the United States government. One of them explained that the patient was suffering with chronic swelling of the larynx, and couldn't talk.

The Pujo committee believes that Bill can talk, but won't.

This is why they are so set on having the junior Rockefeller brother on the stand:

Since 1865 William Rockefeller has been the New York head of the oil trust.

He has represented the oil money in the Vanderbilt railroads, some 40,000 miles, and knows better than John D. does how Standard Oil dollars were joined with Vanderbilt dollars and other Big Dollars under the guiding hand of that skilled combiner, J. Pierpont Morgan.

Bill connects the Rockefeller pocketbook with the Copper trust, the New York gas trust, the Union Pacific, New York Central, Lackawanna, St. Paul, New Haven and smaller railway lines, and Morgan's bunch of banks.

William Rockefeller is in his 72nd year, and has during the last year or two been turning his financial burden over to his son, William G. He has been in the harness since he left the Cleveland public school at the age of 17 to work in a mill.

William, with his brother, formed the William Rockefeller & Co. oil concern in 1864, and began selling "Standard" oil. A year later William, having married Miss Almira Goodsell, moved east and became president of the newly organized Standard Oil Co. of New York. Now it takes nine figures to write his fortune.

William, unlike his older brother, has given no millions to universities or to anything else. He ousted the natives from 52,000 acres in the Adirondacks and created a magnificent private park.

At Tarrytown, too, he bought a wilderness and spent several millions on it.

Bill doesn't golf as well as Brother John, but he plays the fiddle much better, and raises prize strawberries and peaches.
